President Rides in Old Coach and Watches Scenes of '80 Years Ago Re-enacted.

MEACHAM REVERTS TO 40'S

PRESIDENT DEEPLY STIRRED

Special to The New York Times.

MEACHAM, Ore., July 3.—Into this little hamlet, nestling in a natural amphitheatre on the very top stretches of the Blue Mountains of Oregon, President Harding came today to participate in a celebration commemorating the eightieth anniversary of the arrival of the first immigrant wagon in the primitive Oregon country. He found here a colorful atmosphere, redolent of the roaring forties, with the setting and costuming in accord with the historical suggestion with which his address to his people was plentifully sprinkled.

Incident to the celebration there was a dedication of a boulder monument to mark the new Oregon Trail highway, which follows the general line taken by the pioneers who blazed the way to the Oregon country. In his address President Harding sketched the incidents which led to the origin of the immigrant train of 1843. He told the disputed story of how the Rev. Marcus Whitman, fearful the Government would surrender the great Northwest to the British, had gone from what is now Oregon all the way to the nation's capital to appeal to President John Tyler and the Congress to keep this vast territory under the American flag.

"It was a race against time," said President Harding in describing Whitman's perilous journey. "Public opinion was rapidly crystallizing into a judgment that the Oregon country was not worth claiming, much less worth fighting for; that, even though it could be acquired against the insistence of Great Britain, it would prove to be a liability rather than an asset."

From the experience of Whitman and his thousand pioneers President Harding today drew a lesson which, he held, "cannot fail to impress itself."

Praises Rugged Individualism.

"In this test of self-reliant citizenship," said the President, "there came the rugged, militant, wholesome West. Greater things were wrought, larger accomplishment was recorded, greater victory was won in this wholesome, inspiring individualism than will ever attend paternalism or Government assumption of the tasks which are the natural inheritance of the builders who may better serve for themselves. Government may well provide opportunity, but the worth-while accomplishment is the privilege and the duty of men."

Meacham's normal population is about fifty. It was increased to several thousand today. Men, women and children came by train, automobile and wagon from Pendleton and other nearby places to see President Harding and participate in the celebration. Many of them were dressed in the costumes of the picturesque '40s. Women wore high-waisted frocks of gaily printed calico and some adopted the hoop skirts and crinolines of their pioneer grandmothers. Men were there in black slouch hats or the high beavers of the mid-nineteenth century. They wore frock coats and had their trousers tucked into high boots, looking for all the world like characters out of Bret Harte. There were cowboys and cowgirls in purple, yellow, blue and green blouses, each of them a two-gun man or woman.

The setting of the '40s was accentuated by log houses, especially erected for the occasion. There were gambling dens, saloons, dance halls. Fur traders displayed their wares, raw skins of bear, deer, beaver, marten and others, nailed to the log fronts of their stores. The whole thing was well done, engineered by those who were steeped in the historical atmosphere of eighty years ago and able to bring the spirit of 1843 down to 1923.

Rides in Old Concord Coach.

In a motor car President Harding has headed the procession of the Presidential party through the streets of every city and town he has visited since he left Washington nearly two weeks ago. But the Oregon Committee on Arrangements would have none of it in Meacham. The President rode from his train to the place where he delivered his address, a few hundred yards away, in a battered old Concord state coach drawn by six horses. With him were Mrs. Harding, Governor Pierce of Oregon and the Oregon Senators, McNary and Stanfield. The coach's escort was a troop of cavalry, uniformed as were the soldiers of the Regular Army back in the 40's—blue flannel shirts, blue trousers with broad yellow stripe, top boots and the old-time cap with narrow visor which was the uncomfortable and unserviceable headgear of our Regulars almost to Spanish War days.

With the stage coach leading a procession of motor cars containing the members of the Presidential party, the route of the parade led through the street to the imitation frontier town and up a hillside to the speaking place. Pine and fir trees formed the near background, with the mountain ridge behind. Off in a field were the tepees of Indians from the neighboring Umatilla Reservation. Behind the President on the stand was a group of white-bearded men who had come to the Oregon country in the pioneer days.

For the benefit of President Harding and those accompanying him a historical pageant was presented. It simu-

Magistrate Corrigan's House Ransacked in His Absence

Police Headquarters received information this morning that the home of Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan, at 3 East Tenth Street, was entered some time last night and ransacked.

No valuables, it was said, were taken, but all the drawers in the bureaus and desks and other receptacles in the house were emptied and their contents strewn about.

Detectives from the Mercer Street Station and Police Headquarters and finger print experts were sent to the house.

Magistrate Corrigan was not at home. Police Commissioner Enright's attempt to have him and Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier prosecuted for criminal libel because of their attacks on him and his administration is now the subject of inquiry before Judge Crain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, July 3.—A fatal duel between prominent officers of the Red Army has led to the trial of the survivor on the charge of murder before the supreme military tribunal, whose verdict is expected soon.

The presence in the dock of a beautiful girl, Nina Mochavelli, for whom and in whose presence the duel was fought, gave a romantic color to the affair. She will be tried as an accomplice of the principal defendant, Tertoff, in the "murder" of his adversary, Dyakonoff. It is worth noting that the first count of the indictment against Tertoff is not murder, but "action derogatory to the honor of the Red Army," in reviving, with fatal results to his comrade, "the feudalistic custom of officers of the Czarist régime."

The facts in the case are these:

Tertoff, who won the Order of the Red Flag in the wars against the White Generals, and Dyakonoff, who was twice decorated and was commander of a cavalry brigade under Budenny in the Polish War, were both taking a course at the Moscow Staff College, where the girl, Nina, was employed on the secretarial staff. At first she accepted the attentions of Dyakonoff, but afterward transferred her favor to his friend.

The quarrel between the men came to a head on the night of May 31, when Dyakonoff promised to go to Tertoff's room. Learning of Nina's fickleness, Dyakonoff brst into Tertoff's room and fired a revolver at his head. The shot missed Tertoff and Dyakonoff grew sufficiently calm to listen to argument. He swore, however, that the earth was too small for him and Tertoff and proposed to settle the dispute by a duel to the death with revolvers.

Tertoff agreed, and, though Nina now says she tried to restrain them, she nevertheless accompanied the pair to the Neskuchny Gardens, on the outskirts of the city, where a great agricultural fair will be held next month, after each had written a letter disavowing the other's responsibility for his death. There were no seconds, and the whole business smacks more of the action of romantic youngsters than veterans of the Revolutionary army.

The trio reached the Gardens a little before 6 A. M. There Dyakonoff suggested that Tertoff step off forty paces, adding: "You shall have the first shot, as I have already had one shot at you."

Tertoff agreed, and both took their places, with the girl watching them. Calmly Dyakonoff gave the word "Fire!" and as the shot rang out fell on his face with a bullet in his brain.

Tertoff ran to the exhibition headquarters and roused a member of the committee, who hurried back with him to the scene of the the duel, after telephoning for a physician. There they found Nina weeping bitterly over her dead lover, her white gown stained with blood from his head, which was pillowed in her lap.

Tertoff made an excellent impression in court.

He gave his evidence frankly and simply, taking the whole blame upon himself and trying his utmost to shield the girl, whose youth—she is only 20—and beauty pleaded in her favor far more strongly than her tearful and confused explanations.

The verdict is expected to be severe, as an exemplary punishment of "the spirit of caste" vehemently denounced by the prosecutor as contrary to all the principles of the Red Army and the revolution itself. Tertoff will certainly be degraded and expelled from the army. Perhaps both he and the girl will be condemned to death, but it is most unlikely that the extreme penalty will be carried out.

ALLIED ENVOYS FAIL TO SATISFY BRITISH ON RUHR QUERIES

INTERVIEWS TO CONTINUE

THEUNIS EXPLAINS POLICY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Both the French and Belgian Ambassadors were received by Lord Curzon at the Foreign Office today, but so far as can be ascertained their visits passed off without anything in the nature of a development in the relations between this country, France and Belgium.

It is not known to what extent the French and Belgian Governments have replied to the British questionnaire, but it is believed no written note was left by the French Ambassador.

This active resumption of conversations between the British, French and Belgian Governments was preceded by the elimination of certain technical difficulties which showed a desire on all sides to facilitate the discussion. The terms of the French Ambassador's statements to Lord Curzon will be communicated to the British Cabinet tomorrow, and it is understood that Count de Saint-Aulaire and M. Moncheur will report similarly to their Governments, and that the conversations will be continued in the near future.

Belgian Envoy Heard First.

M. Moncheur, the Belgian Ambassador, was the first to call at the Foreign Office. He arrived soon after 4 o'clock and remained for nearly an hour in conversation with the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. M. Moncheur had received his instructions from the Belgian Government and was charged, it is understood, with the duty of representing in preliminary conversation the views of the Belgian Government on certain points concerning which the British Government desires to be more precisely informed.

The first and most important of these relates to German passive resistance in the Ruhr. On this subject the view of the Belgian Government corresponds to that of the French Government, and it is assumed that since Premier Poincaré has intimated that France will enter into no conversations with Germany as long as passive resistance is continued the Belgians adopt the same attitude.

It is believed the Belgian Government is taking active steps to get London and Paris to accept the idea of a restricted conference, in which two French, two British and two Belgian Ministers would take part, to examine the whole question of the Ruhr and reparations, and it is suggested that M. Moncheur may have alluded to the subject in his talk with Lord Curzon today. But there is no information on this point. All that is known is that the conversation was of the most cordial character.

When the Belgian Ambassador had withdrawn the French Ambassador arrived and also had a conversation of about an hour's duration with Lord Curzon. It is believed that no written note was handed in from the French Government. It is said the French Ambassador has received no new instructions.

A written communication from M. Poincaré is in existence and was read on Monday to M. Jaspar, the Belgian Foreign Minister, by M. Herbette, the French Ambassador in Brussels. This presumably formed the basis of statements made by M. Jaspar to Lord Curzon by Comte de Saint-Aulaire, but what the nature of this communication from M. Poincaré to M. Jasper was in detail has not yet been disclosed.

Talks Are Called Unsatisfactory.

LONDON, July 3 (Associated Press).—Count de Saint-Aulaire, the French Ambassador, in an earnest talk with Lord Curzon this afternoon set forth France's views on various phases of the Ruhr question, but failed to define in specific terms his country's exact position on some of the points raised in Lord Curzon's recent questionnaire.

The general verdict of those in a position to know what took place at the conference is that it was "unsatisfactory and inconclusive," but these authorities were quick to add that the way was left open for further discussion. This is taken to mean that the exchange of views will continue for another week, and perhaps longer.

There was undisguised disappointment in British official circles that neither of the Allies showed a disposition to recede on their previously expressed demands. At the same time talk of a rupture is dismissed and the suggestion of independent action by Great Britain is but lightly accepted.

An effective solution of the problem

Six Railroads Announce Wage Increases Affecting Workers in West and South

CHICAGO, July 3.—Wage increases aggregating $310,000 a year and affecting 4,800 employes of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad and the Cincinnati Northern Railroad were announced today through the United States Railroad Labor Board.

The notice, advising the board of the increases which were effective July 1, 1923, was received from E. M. Costin, General Manager of the road.

Three other railroads—the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, the Norfolk & Western and the Louisville & Nashville—have granted increases in wages to their shop mechanics and helpers and apprentices, effective June 1, 1923, the United States Labor Board was advised today.

BOY'S HEAD FAST IN B.M.T. TURNSTILE

PASSENGERS TRY TO HELP

A score of passengers at the B. M. T. elevated station at Brighton Beach, worked in relays for the better part of an hour yesterday in an effort to release Harry Magit, 5 years old, whose head had become wedged between bars of an exit turnstile. Failing to extricate the boy, they summoned in turn plumbers and firemen from Hook and Ladder Company 244, with Acting Battalion Chief Lester Roberts. The boy was finally released before the firemen arrived.

Accompanied by his playmate, Lillian Agen, 5 years old, Harry went to the station, where the two children were accustomed to play "Zoo." Pretending that he was a lion, the boy thrust his head through the bars and roared at Lillian, who clapped her hands in delight. But Harry's roars turned to cries of alarm a moment later, when, on trying to release his head from the bars, he found he was caught fast. He called to Lillian, who hurried to his aid. Try as they would, though, the "lion" was held fast in his trap. Their efforts only served to move the turnstile so as to render escape more difficult.

Lillian was screaming for her parents, and passengers in the station attracted by her cries found Harry, by this time in tears, his neck held tight between the immovable bars. Several passengers tried to turn the gate, but it resisted their stoutest efforts.

Meanwhile, Lillian returned with her father, Isadore Agen, and his brother Harry, both strong men. They tried to force the gate back, but their efforts, too, proved futile. Then Isadore hurried to a nearby shop and returned with two plumbers and hacksaws. Witnesses say the plumbers were in the act of sawing a bar to release the boy when a man appeared on the platform, and, saying he was an official of the B. M. T., threatened to have them arrested for mutilation of company property.

A call was then sent in for the fire company and an ambulance from Coney Island Hospital. Pending their arrival, the two Agen brothers set to work again to extricate the boy.

Harry by this time was showing signs of exhaustion. His head was now held in such a vise-like grip that he could breathe only with the utmost difficulty. It seemed as if the longer the rescuers worked at the bars the tighter they got. And Harry cried aloud when Isadore Agen gripped the horizontal bar that was pressing heavily on the back of his neck, even though Lillian sought to comfort her playmate.

For fully five minutes the Agens wrestled with the bars. Finally as they parted a few inches under the pressure the two men were exerting, Harry gave a final tug, releasing his head, and fell back exhausted. Just then the hook and ladder and the ambulance, with bells clanging, rounded a nearby corner.

For several minutes Dr. Bergen worked over the unconscious boy, who was finally removed to his home, suffering from shock.

4 KILLED, MANY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Crowd Attacks Driver Who Ran Car on Sidewalk and Knocked Down Two Girls.

Four persons were killed in automobile accidents yesterday, the driver of a car was badly beaten by a crowd in Brooklyn when he knocked down two girls in saving the life of a boy, and thirteen persons were hurt when a municipal motor bus toppled over in Queens.

An unidentified man, about 65 years old and dressed in a gray coat and blue trousers, was killed shortly after dawn at Riverside Drive and Eighty-seventh Street by a car operated by John H. Troier of 730 Riverside Drive. He was held for the homicide after he took the body to the Roosevelt Hospital.

John Fawcett, 9 years old, of 663 Tiston Avenue, was mortally injured near his home yesterday morning when he was struck by an automobile operated by Frank J. Hardy of 437 Kline Avenue, City Island. Hardy was held in $2,000 in the Morrisania Court for examination on July 12. The boy died on the way to the hospital.

Frank Lyons, 19 years old, of New Brunswick, N. J., was killed and two other occupants of his car were injured when another automobile crashed into them near Mount Holly, N. J.

Sidney Tubnick, 3 years old, of 994 Monroe Street, West New York, N. J., was killed by an automobile operated by Albert Danielson, 28 years old, of 4,678 Hudson Boulevard, Union Hill, N. J., when the boy with two companions was crossing Hudson Avenue and Seventeenth Street near his home.

Jack Keller, 7 years old, of the same address, received a fracture of the skull, and Alfred Unity, 10 years old, of 301 Eighteenth Street, the third victim of the accident, suffered cuts and bruises about the head and body.

A crowd of 500 men and women attacked Willy Weiner of 1,663 Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn, shortly after 9 o'clock last night at Park and Sheepshead Avenues and would have killed him had not a police squad rescued him. Weiner was saved from the crowd by Policeman Michael Carey of the Clymer Street station.

TO ACCUSE ENRIGHT BEFORE GOVERNOR

SAYS HE HAS EVIDENCE

Commissioner Suspends Two Detectives Who Recanted Testimony Before Judge Crain.

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier declared in a letter written yesterday to Governor Smith that he was "ready and willing to prefer charges" against Police Commissioner Enright "on the evidence I have in my possession."

"The insolent attitude of Commissioner Enright in denouncing the courts of justice, legislators and other public officials who happen to know of his inefficiency as a Police Commissioner warrants an investigation by you as to his fitness for this office," Mr. Cuvillier's letter said.

Asked last night whether the letter to the Governor meant that he would file specific charges, Mr. Cuvillier replied: "If I do not receive an intimation that it would be preferable to wait until the judicial proceedings before Judge Crain are finished I shall go ahead and file specifications."

The Assemblyman in his letter said that on or about April 28 he had written Governor Smith "preferring charges * * * but not specific charges" and requesting the Governor to suspend Commissioner Enright pending investigation, "and that I would then file with you specifications and charges." He declared that he had "certain letters, documents and evidence" bearing on the case and that he intended submitting this evidence to Judge Crain "at the proper time."

Other developments yesterday relating to the police graft charges and counter-charges were a conference between Judge Thomas C. T. Crain of General Sessions and District Attorney Joab H. Banton in which the police situation was discussed; the suspension by Commissioner Enright of Detective Sergeants William H. Morrison and David Lambert, disciplinary action against whom was recommended by Judge Crain a week ago after they had admitted swearing falsely, and a statement by Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield that when Judge Crain had completed his inquiry Mr. Hirshfield intended to reopen his own police graft inquiry.

Judge Crain, who is having his vacation, came to town to talk with Mr. Banton. The matters discussed at the conference were not disclosed, although Mr. Banton said that they related to the evidence before Judge Crain.

Cuvillier's Letter to Governor.

July 3, 1923.

Hon. Alfred E. Smith,
Governor of the State of New York,
Executive Chamber,
Albany, N. Y.

My dear Governor:

I noticed in the public press of today's issue that you state "the Governor has no power to investigate the New York Police Department of a and Mr. Cuvillier undoubtedly is aware of that. The only agency at Albany that can bring about an investigation of the Police Department is the Legislature. There is only one way in which the situation complained of by Assemblyman Cuvillier can be brought before the Governor. The Governor has power to remove a Police Commissioner of New York City on charges. No charges have been lodged with me against Police Commissioner Enright with a view to his removal. If such charges were brought it would be the Governor's duty to consider them and if they were of a character to justify such a proceeding giving both sides a hearing and take whatever action the facts brought out called for."

I am well aware that you have no authority as Governor to investigate the Police Department of the City of New York. This can only be accomplished by legislative investigation and I can assure you from the startling revelations so far as to the inquiries conducted by the Hon. Thomas T. C. Crain, a Justice of the Court of General Sessions, sitting as a City Magistrate, as to bribery, perjury, corruption and bootlegging in the Police Department, and the brazen perjury committed by certain police officers on the witness stand in the presence of high officials of the Police Department and the inertia of both the Police Department and the District Attorney's office in the County of New York in not taking proper measures to bring these police officers to justice that the Legislature would be compelled as a sense of public duty to the people of the City of New York to have a thorough investigation of the Police Department from Enright down.

On or about April 28th, 1923, I wrote you a letter from the Assembly Chamber, in Albany preferring charges against Commissioner Enright as Police Commissioner of the City of New York, not specific charges, but stated that I have certain letters, documents and evidence reflecting on the administration of the office of Commissioner Enright as Police Commissioner of the City of New York, and requested you as Governor to suspend Commissioner Enright pending investigation by you or a commission appointed by you to take testimony. And that I would then file with you specifications and charges; that they have been due to your many duties on the closing days of the Legislature when you had many matters of state to consider, and the disposition of bills before you that had passed the Legislature that you may have overlooked this letter or it did not come to your official notice. Since that time I have been subpoenaed with the Hon. Joseph E. Corrigan, a City Magistrate in the City of New York, charged with criminal

SHELBY FIGHT TODAY INSURED BY A DEAL AT THE LAST MOMENT

Kearns Has Agreed to Take His Third $100,000 Out of the Gate Receipts.

DOUBT HE WILL GET IT ALL

DEMPSEY FAVORED TO WIN

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—The fight between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons on the Fourth of July for the heavyweight championship of the world, which has seemed in doubt for some weeks and was actually off for a couple of hours early this morning, will to all appearances take place at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon (6 P. M. New York time) in the arena just outside this town. What percentage of the arena's 40,000 seats will be filled is doubtful just now, though the beginning of a fair crowd already is in Shelby and more will arrive by train and automobile tomorrow morning. It is doubtful if the additional gate receipts will pay Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, the last hundred thousand of the $310,000 guarantee on which Kearns decided at half past two this morning to take a chance. Where the promoters of the bout, and the business men of Great Falls and Shelby, who have already put up $210,000 for Dempsey and many thousands more for other expenses, are coming out, is not doubtful at all. For that, however, only their own mismanagement and fatuous optimism is responsible.

Gibbons, anywhere from one to six years older than Dempsey, according to whichever report you believe, and probably fifteen pounds or more lighter at the ringside, is figured by most experts to have little if any chance. Men who have watched his training, however, are in some cases more optimistic and there is no doubt that Gibbons is the favorite with most of the people of Shelby, where he has trained, and of all Montana, which has been angered by the high price which Montana promised to pay Kearns and couldn't deliver, and of the entire Northwest.

Dempsey, who will arrive from Great Falls in a special car attached to the train due here at 10:15 tomorrow morning, has virtually no supporters here except the bull fight experts.

Shelby Broke But Optimistic.

Shelby has passed through one sea of trouble after another this Spring, but it finally emerged on dry land on the far side this afternoon, shook the water off its hair and began to cheer up. It is still broke, and will go on being broke for some time to come, but the weather is bright and sunshiny a few more persons are coming to town, the eating concessionaires at last are beginning to make a little money and things are not so bad as they might have been, though pretty bad. Besides, Shelby has landed a new oil refinery and the real estate business is good and there is always optimism—though it was optimism that set Shell for a tumble over this fight.

Mr. Kearns arrived from Great Falls on the morning train and took general charge of the gate receipts for the fight, out of which he is to take his last hundred thousand, turning over the remainder, if any, to the promoters. Being Minister of Finance for this fight is like being Minister of Finance in Germany. It has been the grave of some highly esteemed reputations, but Mr. Kearns probably will survive it because all he wants to get out of it is what is still due Mr. Kearns. He doesn't have to worry about the promoters, managers, investors or stockholders.

Mr. Kearns bore with becoming modesty his new dignity of First in Charge of Gate Receipts, and affably acknowledged the salutations of several gentlemen who also, in their time, were First in Charge of the Gate Receipts. He went up to fight headquarters next door to the title abstract office, took a look into the cash drawer and allowed his graceful eyebrow to lift and his aristocratic nose to wrinkle a moment as he saw what was there in cash. It was some $7,000 or $8,000, the residue of nobody knows how many thousands received, or due, from the advance sale of tickets.

Taking pity on Major J. E. Lane and Loy Molumby, who seem to have been elected as ultimate stockholders out of the numerous persons who at one time or another have been running this affair, he turned over $5,000 of this to them to pay the fighters in the preliminaries and

Germany Requests Return of War Documents Captured by Our Army; Copies May Be Sent

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Germany has requested the American Government to turn over the originals of several hundred official documents captured by the American Army in the World War. This probably cannot be done without the authorization of Congress, but it appears there is no legal bar to making true copies of the documents for delivery to the German Government, which wants them for its historical archives, the originals remaining the property of the United States unless Congress is willing to have them surrendered.

At the same time the President of the Reichsarchiv volunteers to return intact to the United States all the American official documents in the hands of the German authorities. Since these documents are understood to be not more than a dozen in number, however, the exchange is hardly equal.

$1,000,000 in Dividends Go To 30,000 Employes of Ford

DETROIT, July 3.—Distribution of more than $1,000,000 in dividends to 30,000 employes holding investment certificates has been begun by the Ford Motor Company. The distribution is on the basis of 8 per cent. for the six months ending June 30.

When the investment certificate plan was announced it provided a guaranteed return of 6 per cent. per year, but the company has increased the return whenever business conditions permitted.

Employes are permitted to invest one-third of their salary in the certificates, the maximum investment being one year's salary.

BRITISH SHIPS PLAN TO ARRIVE HERE DRY

Owners Now Look for an End of the Snarl Over Liquor in a Short Time.

AWAIT ACTION OF CONGRESS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—According to semi-official information from Southampton, the British steamship companies, as a result of their experiences with the American prohibition law as applied to shipping in New York, have decided in the future to place aboard quantities of liquor sufficient only for the westward voyage.

The Majestic, sailing tomorrow, and the Berengaria leaving Southampton next Saturday, will accordingly carry reduced quantities, but there is a feeling that the position of ships carrying supplies for the homeward voyage will be clarified in the course of the next few days.

The companies are laying particular stress on the fact that passengers had been able to obtain in America and take aboard at New York considerable quantities of liquor for the voyage to England.

There was no lack of drink on the Berengaria which arrived from Southampton this morning. Fifty to 60 per cent. of the first class passengers brought their own supplies, and one traveler had four dozen bottles of whisky in his trunk which were rapidly disposed of among other passengers.

The Liverpool shipowners at a meeting of the Liverpool Steamship Owners' Association today suggested that the way out of the present difficulties might be found by co-operation between the Governments of the two nations.

A resolution was passed calling upon the United States to adhere to the long accepted international practice, under which, within the territorial jurisdiction of every nation the laws of a ship's own flag govern, and to regulate the stores carried for use only on the high seas.

The Association further agreed that to help in the suppression of smuggling of wines and spirits into the United States it was necessary for this country, without agreeing to any extension of the terrotirial waters, to give all reasonable opportunity to the United States Government to detect and deal with smugglers within twelve miles of the American coast.

Temporary Solution in Prospect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3.—The belief that the foreign steamship lines would soon cease to import beverage liquors inside the American three-mile limit was expressed today in an influential quarter of the Administration, and while no intimation was given that such news had been received in official Washington, it appeared that the idea was founded on something substantial.

If the lines do refrain from bringing in liquor in excess of the medicinal supply, the situation will be solved for the time being and Congress can then deal with the matter in December.

In this connection it may be stated that some time ago a prominent official of the Anti-Saloon League said the chances of modifying the ship liquor provisions of the Volstead law would be greatly affected by the manner in which the foreign lines and their nations behaved between now and the time Congress is asked to consider the subject.

A new technical point regarding ship liquor which is believed to be of great importance to British shipping has been called to the attention of Secretary Hughes by the British Embassy. Following the request for information, the Secretary has asked the Treasury for the facts in the case before making a reply to the British Government.

The inquiry results from the case of the British liner Tuscania, which plies between New York and Italian ports, carrying large numbers of Italian passengers, both in cabins and in steerage. The Cunard Line, it is understood, is under contract with the Italian Government for this traffic and by the terms of the contract is bound to furnish liquor rations in accordance with the Italian law observed by the Italian steamship lines.

GERMAN SABOTAGE CHARGED AND DENIED AS LEVIATHAN SAILS

HAVOC LAID TO ACCIDENT

Doubt Aroused by Ship Board Inquiry Stirs Controversy Over "Ruthless" War Acts.

On the eve of the Leviathan's departure on her first voyage as an American transatlantic liner, a controversy arose yesterday as to whether the Germans had actually damaged her machinery while she lay interned at Hoboken just before America entered the war, or whether the newspaper reports and official statements to that effect were nothing but the result of war hysteria and propaganda.

The controversy started when evening newspapers published a story that F. H. Gibbs of Gibbs Brothers, naval architects and marine engineers, who had charge of the reconditioning of the Leviathan, stamped as false the wartime report of German attempts to cripple the Leviathan, and that the Shipping Board was considering whether it should not destroy $15,000 worth of souvenir booklets which told a vivid narrative of German sabotage on the Leviathan. Mr. Gibbs's statement was supported by Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who said he had received similar information from W. F. Gibbs, brother of F. H. Gibbs.

The official souvenir booklet, prepared by the United States Lines, which operates the Leviathan for the United States Shipping Board, however, contained the statement that the Navy Department found that "no malicious damage" had been attempted by the Germans upon the Leviathan. Shipping Board employes in charge of the publication of the booklet declared that the authority for the statement was an official Navy report, to which the writer of the article whitewashing the Germans had had access.

Naval Officer Charged Sabotage.

The publication of statements absolving the Germans from blame in the Leviathan case, was immediately followed by testimony from official sources upholding the popular belief that the Germans actually did practice sabotage.

Captain H. P. Jessop, U. S. N., who at the beginning of the war was engineering officer at the New York Navy Yard, and acted as an advisory officer in connection with the interned German ships before they were turned over to the Shipping Board, declared that he had found instances of sabotage on the Leviathan, although it had been damaged least of any of the German ships because its commanding officer, who had helped to build the ship, could not bear to see her damaged, and prevented the complete execution of the sabotage plan.

Captain Jessop made a detailed statement of the damage he found on the Leviathan when he examined it immediately after America entered the war.

Further testimony supporting the contention that the Germans did perform deliberate and malicious damage to the Leviathan was found in "Our Navy at War," a volume published last year by Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy. Secretary Daniels declared that all the interned German ships had been disabled, their engines and machinery smashed, on orders issued by Ambassador von Bernstorff even before ruthless U-boat warfare was declared.

Secretary Daniels devoted an entire chapter in his book to telling the story of "The Fleet the Kaiser Built for Us," relating how the engines and machinery of the ships were wrecked by the crews, how the Navy repaired them and had them running in a few months, and how the former German ships carried 500,000 American troops to Europe, emphasizing "the remarkable record made by the Leviathan."

No "Vivid" Story in Booklet.

Copies of the booklet, supplied at the Shipping Board offices, 45 Broadway, showed that it does not give a vivid story of German sabotage at all, but, in fact, coincided with the statements of Representative Madden and Mr. Gibbs.

Ross D. Whytock of the Shipping Board publicity department, who was responsible for the Leviathan Booklets, explained how the booklets had figured in the controversy. He said that as soon as he saw the statement attributed to Representative Madden in an evening newspaper he had telephoned to Mr. Gibbs, asking him if there was anything in the booklets that conflicted with his knowledge of the facts as to the condition in which the Germans left the ship.

According to Mr. Whytock, he told Mr. Gibbs that if the booklets contained any false statements they would be destroyed, as their entire contents should be accurate. The booklets, incidentally, are to be distributed among the passengers on the Leviathan today, and are to be sent to shipping agencies and newspapers throughout the country for publicity purposes.

Mr. Whytock said that Mr. Gibbs assured him that nothing in the booklets was inconsistent with the facts, but that Mr. Gibbs, who was in his office at one time, and overheard only part of the conversation, got a distorted impression of the facts as I gave them out in that form to the newspapers. He supplied copies of the booklets to show that their account of the Leviathan's treatment by the Germans is in accord with the Madden-Gibbs version.

of the Leviathan in colors decorates the cover, and numerous full-page pictures show the luxury and comforts of the saloons and staterooms on the great ship. Besides a number of articles descriptive of the ship and its officers and equipment, there is a story headed: "American Ingenuity Overcame Heavy Handicaps in Preparing Leviathan for Transport Duty. Early History of the World's Largest Liner Was Dramatic, Held Up in U. S. Waters at Opening of Hostilities; Dismantled Machinery Assembled Rapidly."

Resume of Newspaper Stories.

After telling of the three years during which the Vaterland lay idle at her pier in Hoboken, this article goes on:

"On Feb. 3, 1917, it was suddenly announced in the newspapers that the machinery of the Vaterland has been dismantled in the previous twenty-four hours. The feat was accomplished by the Germans under the very nose of the neutrality squad patroling the pier night and day. This drastic action was undertaken shortly after it became apparent that this country was drifting into war with Germany. Undoubtedly it was done under orders from the German Government to disable the great vessel and make her incapable of use as a transport for American troops."

Mr. Whytock said that the entire foregoing paragraph was intended to be a resume of the newspaper stories published at the time the Vaterland was seized by the United States Government, and was not to be interpreted as the Shipping Board version of the fact. He called attention to the next two paragraphs of the booklet:

"On April 6, 1917, she was seized by the United States Government authorities. The decision came quickly to convert the Vaterland into a troopship. In July, 1917, she was commissioned as a ship of the navy, Captain J. W. Oman, U. S. N., commanding. Her name was changed later by Navy Department order to the U. S. S. Leviathan.

"The navy found that no malicious damage had been attempted by the Germans, but parts of the machinery had been dismantled and scattered. During the three years the liner had been idle at Hoboken, however, deterioration had been rapid. The two gigantic turbine motors were found to require entire rebuilding. Every length of piping and every piece of machinery had to be examined and tested. It was necessary to take apart the gyro compasses, trace and test the various wires. All the electric wiring of the ship had to be overhauled."

The foregoing paragraph, Mr. Whytock said, represented the Shipping Board attitude. He said that the writer of the article had access to an official Navy Department report on which had been based the conclusion that "no malicious damage" had been attempted.

Daniels Statement Quoted.

On the next page, however, the same article quoted former Secretary of the Navy Daniels in statements, which, Mr. Whytock admitted, raised an issue between Secretary Daniels and the alleged navy report. The article continued:

"Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in his memoirs published after the war, showed how the German fleet interned in this country, was utilized by the United States to aid in the downfall of its former owners. It was the belief of the Germans, who dismantled or injured the machinery of these vessels, that they could never be repaired in time to affect the outcome of the war. Even American experts estimated originally that the repairs would require from one to two years. But the navy, by using electric welding and other new methods, made them serviceable within a few months, and all were carrying American troops or supplies before the end of 1917."

Mr. Whytock said that the booklets would be distributed to the passengers on the Leviathan today, according to schedule, and would not be destroyed. He said that he may have used the figures $18,000 to designate the cost of the booklets in his telephone talk with Mr. Gibbs, but it was only an offhand estimate, and he did not know exactly what they cost.

Mr. Gibbs, at his office at 1 Broadway, also told reporters that he regarded the story in the booklets as a correct statement of the facts, and declared that he did not believe that the Germans had committed any sabotage on the Leviathan.

"I do not believe there was any malicious attempt by the Germans to ruin the machinery of this vessel, Mr. Gibbs said. I do not think there were any such actions as smashing machinery with sledge hammers, and so on."

He said that he could not tell for certain the cause of the damage to the machinery found when the Navy took over the Vaterland, but thought the most plausible theory was that the greater part of the damage had been done in an accident encountered when the Germans were taking the ship out on its Sebarian kick on its last trip to Europe before the war. On that occasion, he said, the mammoth vessel had got out of control and plunged across the river to the Manhattan side, bumping into some Southern Pacific freighters. It was most likely during this accident, Mr. Gibbs thought, was forcing too much steam into the engines and giving her too much power.

Explains Sense of Damage.

A natural consequence of using too much steam, Mr. Gibbs said, would have caused injury to the turbine blades such as was discovered later by the Navy. Too high steam pressure might cut some of the thousands and thousands of bladings, he said, but would not have caused enough immediate trouble to prevent the ship going across the ocean and back without making repairs. He thought the Vaterland returned to this country and was interned before repairs had been made. Unskilled attempts by her own engineers to repair the turbine bladings, he thought, might have caused the damage which Mr. Gibbs thought that three years' disuse and inactivity may have had something to do with whatever dismantling and scattering of parts were observed when the Navy took over the ship. Members of the crew, he said, also might have caused some accidental damage during the long internment.

Representative Madden gave out a statement in Washington, similar in purport to Mr. Gibbs's and some persons in Washington hinted that the conclusion that part of the official history of the war might have to be re-written. But the fact that the Germans did commit sabotage on the Leviathan was made clear in a statement in Washington by Captain Jessop, who is very highly praised in Secretary Daniels's book because of his suggestion of the use of electric welding, which greatly shortened the time needed to repair the damage done to the interned German ships.

"On inspecting the Leviathan in April, 1917," said Captain Jessop, "I found the following condition in her machinery: The blading in the backing turbines partially destroyed, necessitating a renewal of approximately thirty rows of new blading. This blading was larger than anything that had been manufactured in the United States and special dies for turning out the metal had to be made.

"There was an eight-foot crack in the starboard high pressure turbine, probably caused in operation. The astern rotors of these turbines were also badly damaged and in some cases had to be renewed. The thrust collars had been taken out and had been very much injured, and about 1,500 tons of water were in the space. Fortunately the Germans had not thrown these collars overboard, and we afterward covered them from the bilges and replaced them. The boilers were improperly designed for economical steaming and we changed the design, thereby saving 200 tons of coal per day by this operation.

More Damage on Other Ships.

"There were holes, caused no doubt by being bored in the overhead pipes, all of which were fortunately discovered before any real damage had been done and the pipes were replaced.

"The Leviathan was probably least damaged of any of the German ships by sabotage, though there were instances of it. This was due to the fact that the German commanding officer intended the complete carrying out of the destructive plan. He had built the ship and could not bear to see her damaged and this probably saved a great deal of work.

"The electrical installation was very complicated. There were 581 clocks all operated electrically from the master clock on the bridge which set them automatically every four hours. The dangers of overheating were increased by the fact that the Germans had placed bombs of various descriptions on so many ships that we did not dare turn the electricity on any used before we had gone over every inch of it.

"The ship was also wired with a one wire system which electrically increased the danger of fire. In the case of the Leviathan the 8-foot electric weld made by the navy engineers is still there and in such condition that they did not think it necessary to re-test it."

Representative Madden, who came to New York last night preparatory to sailing on the Leviathan today, was told at the Hotel Pennsylvania about Captain Jessop's detailed statement.

"I don't know what's in the 'datskia,'" he said. "All I know is what Gibbs Brothers and the Shipping Board tell me. They say there is no truth in the statement that sabotage was committed by the Germans on the Leviathan. There was some damage to the ship, but it was caused in docking."

Mr. Madden said that he got his first information about the alleged mythical nature of the sabotage from Mr. Gibbs during the recent trial voyage of the Leviathan.

Orders to Destroy Leviathan.

It was learned in Washington that the records of the Navy Department and Department of Justice bear out Captain Jessop's statement of the facts. According to officials of the Department of Justice, its agents found written instructions for wholesale destruction on the Leviathan and other German ships, and if these instructions had been carried out the great liner would have been wrecked, but the captain, who had supervised its construction from the laying of the keel, refrained from fully mutilating the ship because of his love for her.

Former Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in his annual report for 1918, made the following reference to the repair of the German ships:

"When war was declared with Germany all the German ships lying in our ports, many of them of the highest class of transatlantic passenger steamers, were immediately taken over by our Government. Upon examination by our officers it was found that the machinery of all of them had been deliberately damaged by their crews, in many cases seriously, and the character of the injury was such as to denote that the work had been carried out under a central direction, and that it had been well planned.

"The principal damage was the breaking of cast iron parts of the main engines, chiefly the cylinders, though in one case boiler stays were sawed half in two and in others the boilers were ruined by dry firing and had to be renewed. There was in addition much vandalism of a minor character, but the remedying of this was insignificant in comparison with the gigantic task of repairing the cylinders, some of which were more than nine feet in diameter."

It was never claimed officially at the time the Leviathan was repaired for use in the war that there had been as much damage done to her as to other German vessels. It was charged by officials of the Wilson Administration that damage by sabotage was done to 108 ships by their crews and the Vaterland was one of those named as so damaged. An official announcement by the Wilson Administration issued Dec. 13, 1917, after the damage to all 108 of the German vessels had been repaired by American naval officers, made this reference to the Leviathan:

"The forty-six boilers of the Vaterland showed evidence of poor handling, according to reports of the naval engineers. The presence of a great amount of oil indicated poor marine practice, the Germans using lubricant in the cylinders of the auxiliaries, a practice long abandoned in American service.

"A few minor attempts had been made to disable the ship such as boring holes in a section of suction pipe, these holes being puttied and concealed; the removal of glands from the stern-tube stuffing-box and other incidental sabotage.

"There was just enough evidence of mutilation to warrant full investigation, and the vast mass of machinery, electric apparatus and piping in the Vaterland was patiently and doggedly disarmished before she was sent to sea. Original defects in her engine equipment were corrected, she was overhauled and in many respects refitted, and on the whole she was declared a better ship when she entered the service of the United States than when she took her maiden voyage."

LEVIATHAN TO CARRY 7,000 BAGS OF MAIL

Six Truckloads of Specially Marked Packages Go Aboard—American Ships Favored.

When the Leviathan sails today she will carry between 6,000 and 7,000 bags of mail for French and English delivery. The loading began last Friday afternoon, when letters specifically marked for Leviathan transportation were placed aboard. Six automobile loads of mail are expected at the pier at 5 o'clock this morning.

When the America of the United States Lines sailed for Hamburg last Saturday she carried about 5,000 bags of mail. According to officials of the steamship company, the record was set early last December, when the George Washington sailed with 11,000 bags. In contrast with these figures, it was learned that the Aquitania sailed yesterday with only 107 bags; the Olympic left on Saturday with 130, and the Manchuria departed last Thursday with 13.

Explaining the significance of these figures, Thomas C. Walter, Superintendent of the Outgoing Foreign Mail at the Varick Street Post Office, said that preference is always given to boats flying the American flag, with the exception of course of designated mail.

"If a ship sails today, for instance, and there is an American boat sailing tomorrow, we always hold over the mail for the American liner," he said. "In many cases, too, we find the United States boats are faster. They are passenger boats, having aboard representatives of the Post Office Department to sort the mail."

Mr. Walter explained that the Paris of the French lines sailed with a large amount of mail on Wednesday. Much of the foreign mail that arrived at the Varick Street station after Wednesday went to the America, sailing on Saturday. Letters that arrived after the departure have been kept for the Leviathan, he said. He denied rumors that foreign mails had been held up for the Leviathan, to give her the distinction of carrying record mail. American boats have always received preference, Mr. Walter insisted.

SIX LINERS BRING 4,000 MORE ALIENS

1,802 Italians, Germans, Poles, Croats and Russians Inspected at Ellis Island.

The immigrants landed yesterday at Ellis Island from the steamships Dante Alighieri, Giulio Cesare, Muenchen and Aquitania numbered 2,000, and 1,808 were examined and medically inspected before the depot closed at 5:30 P. M. Of the total more than 1,500 were Italians and the remainder were Germans, Poles, Slavs, Croats and Russians with a few British from the Aquitania, which had only 100 immigrants, all told.

There were 600 cases appealed and an effort will be made to handle them quickly by sending the details to Washington by telegraph instead of by mail, as heretofore. The decisions of the Labor Department will be telegraphed back to Ellis Island and it is expected that the procedure will be greatly expedited. Ellis Island accommodated 1,502 last night.

Deputy Commissioner of Immigration Byron R. Uhl said yesterday afternoon that the allotments for July had been exhausted for Albania, Africa, other Asia, other Europe, Piume, Turkey, Portugal, Greece, Syria, Palestine and Egypt, which is not included in the quota for Africa. No immigrants who landed yesterday were barred because of the filling of the quotas for this month, but it may affect the 1,500 who will land today from the Albania, Pretoria Adriatic and Franconia. Mr. Uhl said that if there is no congestion the officials on Ellis Island ought to get clear of the present rush tomorrow night. Then, he said, there will be a lull until August.

Six steamships arrived yesterday from Europe, the Ohio, Oscar II., Franconia, Esthonia, Drottningholm and President Monroe, bringing 4,000 more immigrants from all parts of Europe.

NEW FRANCONIA HAS DECK SPORTS ARENA

Latest of Cunarders Arrives Here With 1,645 Passengers—Designed for Cruising.

The new Cunarder Franconia arrived yesterday from Liverpool and Queenstown with 1,645 passengers in its three classes after being delayed several hours by fog, which the ship had encountered daily since last Wednesday, Captain G. W. Nelson, R. N. R., the master, said.

The vessel is a 20,000-ton turbine oil burner which has been specially fitted out by the builders on the Clyde for cruising purposes and will start on her first round-the-world cruise for the American Express Company in November.

She has a novel feature in a sports arena on the "E" deck, which contains a spacious swimming pool, squash racquets court and a well equipped gymnasium. Twelve women swimming champions from the Madison Square Garden pool visited the Franconia yesterday afternoon and dived into the water that was said to have been pumped up in the Gulf Stream so that it would be warm enough for them. The arena takes up a space of 600 square feet the whole width of the ship. The thermal system of ventilation has been installed throughout the ship and makes the cabins comfortable on the hottest days, Purser F. E. Owen said, and in addition there are two large "plunges." The Franconia has accommodations for 241 first, 356 second and 1,048 third class passengers, and has regal suites and a number of cabins with private bathrooms. The public rooms on deck are artistically decorated, comfortably furnished and very spacious.

UNDERWOOD TO RUN, HIS FRIENDS ASSERT

MAY TAKE PASSIVE ROLE

Some Leaders Encouraging a Ford Third Party Movement as an Aid to Democrats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Senator Underwood of Alabama, considered one of the leading candidates for the Democratic nomination for President, returned today from a four months' trip abroad, devoted to pleasure, observation and study of economical and political conditions. He declined to cast his hat into the political arena, but is expected formally to define his attitude toward the Presidency in a speech to the Alabama Legislature or in some other way within the next ten days.

The boom for Senator Underwood started in his home State when the Legislature addressed a letter to him early in March last, requesting him to enter the Presidential race. He avoided answering that letter by departing for Europe. Before he left, however, a movement in his behalf had started among conservatives in the Democratic Party, and liberals on the Eighteenth Amendment. It is known that powerful politicians in many States are prepared to push Mr. Underwood's campaign at the proper moment, provided he does not discourage it.

Some of Mr. Underwood's close political advisers assert that the reply he will make to his home Legislature, which reconvenes on July 15, will not put a quietus on the boom, which has gained great headway in the last few months, despite the fact that it has run into the more aggressive candidacy of William Gibbs McAdoo and the Ford movement.

Mr. Underwood, unless he changes his mind in the next ten days, is a real candidate for the Presidency. He has no intention of announcing his candidacy with a blaze of horns, but his utterances on the subject will show that he views the movement with complacency and hope. Mr. Underwood, however, is a man who studies situations with care. After the 15th he will be carefully analyse the conditions surrounding the Presidential contest and the possibilities in the Democratic Party, he will allow his position to be known in certain terms.

Thinks He Will Not Be Active.

Some of those who know his mind are of the opinion that he will not enter actively into the race because of the belief of many Democratic leaders that neither he nor McAdoo is aggressive enough to satisfy the progressive element in the Democratic Party and in the country at large.

That Senator Underwood will command a strong vote in the convention, should he enter the Presidential primaries is undisputed. Those who are opposed to McAdoo say the Senator will start the race with more votes than the former Secretary of the Treasury. They are insisting that Mr. Underwood should allow his name to go before the country in order to weaken McAdoo, since with Underwood in the convention, they are satisfied that he would lead McAdoo and gain in strength as the "favorite sons" disappear in the early balloting.

Senator Underwood is generally recognized by those favoring other aspirants as one of the commanding leaders in the Democratic Party, and one who in his private business has shown himself a successful executive. Those who say that he does not fit in the present situation, with radicalism sweeping many sections and blocs dominating Congress, will not say that he does not have all the qualifications which would make him a good President and a composer of differences in the Democratic Party.

Mr. Underwood is not a conservative of the accepted type. He does not overlook the fact that changed conditions demand new treatment. If anything, he might be classed as a progressive-conservative. As opposed to McAdoo and Ford, he is a Standpatter, but to those who have followed his public life he represents sanity and progress and is opposed to isolation, having been in favor of the ratification of the League of Nations Covenant.

Also against all Senator Underwood's qualifications for the Presidency appears his record on the Eighteenth Amendment. He has been consistently wet in his legislative action, and is looked upon by the wets as an advocate of liberalism who would be acceptable to that element as Gilbert Hitchcock has been on this subject—which is that prohibition is a State and not a Federal matter—Mr. Underwood is as strongly in favor of the enforcement of the law as is President Harding. But it is believed that he would advocate modification of the Volstead act as a step to aid in the enforcement of the law. In other words, those who appear to know his views on the subject say that Mr. Underwood would like to see the law liberalized so as to permit 2.75 per cent. beer, believing that the sale of such a beverage would lessen the breaking of the present law.

Look for Early Campaign.

Democratic leaders expect to see the Summer months filled with early political activity in case Mr. Underwood does not take himself entirely out of the race. Any announcement from him which can be interpreted as showing acceptance of the boom initiated by the Alabama Legislature is sure to make the friends of McAdoo more aggressive and may lead the supporters of Ford to show their hand.

At present some Democratic leaders are saying what they can quickly to encourage Ford to become a third party candidate. Their present plan is to force Ford into the Democratic primaries, believing that he would be defeated in the convention and would leave the convention angry and run on a third party ticket. With Ford on a third party ticket, these politicians say, he would draw more from the Republicans and give the election to the Democrats, as happened in 1912, when Theodore Roosevelt headed the Progressive Party ticket. In the opinion of many Democrats the convention is going to select a compromise candidate who will be acceptable to many of the friends of McAdoo and Underwood, and there is strong talk tonight that Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, a former Secretary of the Treasury and a McAdoo leader, may inherit the honor as the result of a deadlock in the convention as the result of the rule requiring a two-thirds vote to select a Presidential nominee. Some color is given to this by the recent developments in Mr. Glass's home State. The faction, headed by Senator Swanson, which has been opposed to Mr. Glass, has composed its differences and now is advocating the Senator as a "favorite son."

FLIERS RESCUED AT SEA.

Beach Guards Rush Boat to Fallen Hydroplane.

Special to The New York Times.

CAPE MAY, N. J., July 3.—Strollers on the boardwalk here last night were startled by cries coming from the ocean. Knowing that some one was in distress, they ran into the Convention Hall and notified Rutherford Baker and Jack Meldrum, two members of the City Life Guards, who, despite a heavy sea, launched the lifeboat. The cries came from two aviators in a navy hydroplane which had developed engine trouble when rounding the Delaware Capes en route from League Island Navy Yard to New York.

The pilot of the plane, Milton Kray, was brought ashore by the life guards, but Dixon Davis, the other man on the hydroplane, refused to leave the plane. The City Life Guards telephoned to Captain Crease of Cold Spring Coast Guard station, who, with his crew, launched the Coast Guard power boat and went to the assistance of the hydroplane. The guards towed the plane into Cape May harbor.

HARDING IS CHEERED ON PLEAS FOR PEACE

But Audiences Are Less Enthusiastic on World Court as Means to End War.

OREGON PROVES FRIENDLY

Special to The New York Times.

MEACHAM, Ore., July 3.—Advocacy of American participation in the World Court of Justice at The Hague continues to be a feature of President Harding's addresses. He seldom misses an opportunity to pound home the reasons for his espousal of it. In his latest speeches he has made an appeal to the people of the Far West to bring pressure to bear on their Senators to vote for the resolution giving the Senate's sanction to membership of the United States in this tribunal.

Late last night in the Armory at Spokane, after he had concluded reading his prepared address, the President delivered an extemporaneous peroration concerning his World Court proposal. His remarks were well received, especially those voicing his hope that America would never become involved in war and expressing the wish that this country use its influence in the interests of preserving the world's peace.

The demeanor of the Spokane gathering was similar to that of audiences in the Rocky Mountain region, to which the President has made his World Court appeal, with perhaps in the case of Spokane a larger degree of approving responsiveness when he mentioned the World Court itself. In practically every attempt by the President to arouse public sentiment for his Court proposal he has produced considerable enthusiasm for the principle of preserving peace, but the applause has been less enthusiastic for the World Court as the means to that end. Last night in Spokane, however, he brought a big round of handclapping when he pointed to the Court as the most practical agency for furthering the peace of the world.

Before he began the reading of his prepared address at Spokane, the President took occasion to tell his audience that "in simple truth we are not engaged in a political pilgrimage." He gave assurance that "we are really traveling across the country in order to know our own America and to learn more about a vast territory which belongs to us and lies beyond."

In the extemporaneous peroration dealing with World Court problems, he again disclaimed any political purpose in his tour. "I have no especial project or policy to lay before the American people," he said. "From time to time I have been reporting on the affairs of Government and saying, quite apart from the partisan viewpoint, some of the things I think America ought to do."

Appeals to Spokane Audience.

Telling the audience that he was sure we were losing a little of the spirit that made America alert and united in the World War, the President contended that "we ought to be just as interested and just as much spiritually inspired in times of peace." Carrying out this theme, he continued:

"When we come to appraise, as I have been called upon to do—nay, as you have been called upon to do from the viewpoint of your own homes—the consequences of war, I know that I speak what is in your hearts when I tell you that we never want the United States of America involved in another war.

"We have come to a period of civilization when we find a richer satisfaction in the triumphs of peace. There are agents and instrumentalities for the prevention of war. I was not a supporter of the League of Nations proposal; I do not believe that America ever will be. But there are international agencies for the promotion of peace. Perhaps I should better express it should I say there are international agencies which tend to prevent the irritations and grievances which lead to war.

"There has been established in the Old World an international Court of Justice before which nations may take their justifiable disputes for settlement. It is a court of a very high order; and America, without any adhesion to the protocol establishing this court has a judge on the bench of that International Court. It is an instrumentality infinitely better calculated to adjust disputes than any agency ever set up before in the world, and I believe with all my heart that America without surrendering any of its independence, without being entangled in the affairs of the Old World, without jeopardizing its interests in any way, can subscribe to this International Court of Justice and give of its power and influence to make it a great agency for the furtherance of peace in the world.

"I have asked the Senate for its assent to a negotiation looking to our adherence to this Court. I want from you that irrefutable expression of a conscience of this republic which will lead the Senate to say 'Aye, Aye, we, too, favor this step in the interest of peace among the nations of the world.'

Won't Surrender Anything.

"I can assure you, my countrymen, there will be no entanglement. There will be no surrender of anything we cherish, but it will be an expression of that conscience and that aspiration which I know is in every American heart, and will enable the energies, the force, the thought, the brain and the will-power of America to be devoted to those activities which make for the triumphs of peaceful life rather than impose the dangers, the liabilities, aye, the immeasurable cost of war.

"I do not believe, my countrymen, we are living up the highest interest of God, the Creator, unless we give our influence and power to the furtherance of peace among nations and confidence and brotherhood among men."

Cheers and very general handclapping came from the crowd as the President concluded.

This was the most direct appeal made by the President for an expression of public sentiment intended to influence Senatorial support of American participation in the World Court. Of the two Washington Senators, Jones, Republican, is credited with being sympathetic toward the President's proposal. In that understanding Mr. Harding's appeal at Spokane is likely to be construed as directed to Senator Dill, Democrat, who was elected last November and has not taken his seat in the Senate.

From both the political and personal standpoint President Harding found himself in friendly territory when he came into Oregon today. The flareback in public sentiment which caused the election of a Democratic Governor in this normally Republican State last year, has begun to recede with consequent advantage to the President and his political party. The Democratic Governor's election was attributed largely to the influence of the Ku Klux Klan, which obtained a powerful following for its drive against the continuance of sectarian schools, with Catholic parochial schools the main target. The regent municipal elections in some of the larger cities, however, have gone against Klan candidates and there is every appearance of a drift from radicalism and sensationalism.

Like Harding Personally.

In Oregon as in other States in the Far West visited by Mr. Harding on his tour there has been a rather general kindly feeling toward him personally. But politically he came in for that rather general criticism which prevailed last Summer when the coal and railway strikes were on and crop prices were not good and business conditions generally were far from satisfactory. With the present approach to a better state of affairs the tendency to look with more leniency on the National Administration in Washington has become apparent and it is claimed by Republican politicians in this State that as far as his personal political fortunes are concerned Mr. Harding will get the benefit of it.

At the same time the President's westward tour has demonstrated that the people of the sections through which he has traveled have lost patience with politicians of both parties. This accounts to a considerable degree for the very marked "Ford for President" sentiment encountered throughout the West. It is especially strong in the Rocky Mountain country, with Utah less impregnated with it than adjacent States.

In Oregon, and to a certain degree elsewhere in the Far West, there is a tendency on the part of politicians to cut loose from party principles and stand in each individual case on platforms of their own. This condition is furthered by the willingness of many people to support aspirants for office who show independence of party discipline.

There is some evidence that President Harding's tour has helped his Administration. To what degree it will help candidates of the Republican Party in next year's elections is problematical.

The President's coming into States remote from the capital seems to have pleased the people, to have brought some degree of a return of party allegiance among many Republicans who have exhibited recalcitrant tendencies, and to have given the President a better standing than he had in the period of a year or more when dissatisfaction was widespread.

HARDING TAKES PART IN PIONEER PAGEANT

lated periods from the early nineteenth century, when John Jacob Astor and other intrepid souls came into the wild Oregon country. Astor and Thomas Jefferson were personated in the pageant. So were Captain Grey and those earliest pioneers of more than a century ago. One historical division of the display pictured John C. Fremont, Kit Carson, Buffalo Bill, and others of the later but still pioneer Wild West, pack trains of the '40s, Indians, cowboys and cowgirls were in the line which passed in procession before the President and Mrs. Harding.

Between times the President and Mrs. Harding had luncheon. Every other moment was crowded. It was as busy a day as the President has had since he left Washington, but it had the advantage of features which entertained.

In concluding his prefaced address, President Harding recited a verse beginning:

There are no new worlds to conquer
Gone is the last frontier.

He described it as "Your Own Best Song." There was much curiosity as to its authorship. An Oregon newspaper telegraphed to Meacham:

"Who wrote 'Our Own Best Song' and what is it called?"

Refers to Doubt of Whitman Story.

MEACHAM, Ore., July 3 (Associated Press).—The President, in delivering his address today, touched a controversy which raged in Oregon for years and still is occasionally stirred up. This dispute hinges about the question of whether Marcus Whitman saved the Oregon country for the Union by a plea to President Tyler. There are those in Oregon who say that he did and others who declare that Whitman had little or nothing to do with it.

Mr. Harding in his address for today, written before he left Washington, headed straight into the controversy by relating the story of Whitman's appearance before President Tyler. Then he added:

"I have recited this story mindful of the fact that it is a subject of controversy. Whether it is correct or not, it is an inspiration and should be handed down from generation to generation. The same is true of the stories of Paul Revere's ride and of Barbara Fritchie, both of which have been attacked as unfounded. I do not like the iconoclast to come along and take away our finest stories. I like the story of Whitman. If it isn't true, it ought to be."

President Harding's Speech on the Oregon Trail

My Countrymen:

As I stand here in the shadow of the great hills, my mind reverts to the placid banks of the broad Potomac. There, as here, to an American proud of his country and revering her traditions, there is much of patriotic interest, and between these rugged mountains and those fertile lowlands I find much in common. Living history records many indissoluble links, to one of which it seems fitting that I should direct your attention today.

Of the many rooms in the White House which possess the peculiar charm of association with epochal happenings, the one most fascinating to me is that which formerly comprised the Cabinet room and the President's study. Through its high windows one's gaze is drawn irresistibly to the towering granite shaft whose very grandeur, exceeded by no other monument in the world, admirably symbolizes the matchless character of George Washington.

The beautifully carved mahogany bedposts are those upon which fell the eyes of Andrew Jackson when opened from the troubled slumber which even to this day occasionally falls to the lot of an over-weary President. Sunk into the marble mantel piece is a bronze tablet recording the circumstance that it was in this room that Abraham Lincoln signed the great emancipation proclamation which struck the shackles of slavery from millions of human beings.

The Beginning of Oregon.

Yet another episode of hardly less importance in the building of our mighty nation took place within those walls. Before my mind's eye, as I stood in that historic chamber a few days ago, appeared the vivid picture. I beheld seated at his desk, immaculately attired, the embodiment of dignity and courtliness, John Tyler, tenth President of the United States. Facing him, from a chair constructed for a massive frame, his powerful spirit gleaming through his cavernous eyes, was the lion-visaged Daniel Webster, Secretary of State.

The door opened and there appeared before the amazed statesmen a strange and astonishing figure. It was that of a man of medium height and sturdy build, deep chested, broad shouldered, yet lithe in movement and soft of step. He was clad in a coarse fur coat, buckskin breeches, fur leggings, and moccasins, looking much the worse for wear. But it was the countenance of the visitor, as he stood for an instant in the doorway, that riveted the perception of the two chiefs of State. It was that of a religious enthusiast, tenaciously earnest yet revealing no suggestion of fanaticism, bronzed from exposure to pitiless elements and seamed with deep lines of physical suffering, a rare combination of determination and gentleness—obviously a man of God, but no less a man among men.

Such was Marcus Whitman, the pioneer missionary hero of the vast, unsettled, unexplored Oregon country, who had come out of the West to plead that the State should acquire for civilization the empire that the churches were gaining for Christianity.

Many of the exploits of America's resolute sons are recounted in prose and verse. How often in our youth, and even in later years, have we been thrilled by the story of how "on through the night rode Paul Revere, through every Middlesex village and farm," to call the Minute Men to embattle at Lexington and fire "the shot heard 'round the world!" How many times we have shuddered at the impending fate of the Shenandoah Valley, with "Sheridan twenty miles away!" I loved the martial notes of those stirring verses as a boy, love them still.

Marcus Whitman's Feat.

But, when I stood in that historic room in the White House and my imagination depicted the simple scene, I could not but feel that the magnificence of Marcus Whitman's glorious deed has yet to find adequate recognition in any form. Here was a man who, with a single companion, in the dead of Winter, struggled through pathless drifts and blinding storms, 4,000 miles, with the sole aim to serve his country and his God. Eighty years and eight months ago he was pushing grimly and painfully through this very pass on his way from Walla Walla to Fort Hall, thence, abandoning the established northern route as impassable, off to the south through unknown, untrodden lands, past the Great Salt Lake, to Santa Fé, then hurriedly on to St. Louis, and finally, after a few days, again on the homestretch to his destination, taking as many months as it now takes days to go from Walla Walla to Washington.

It was more than a desperate and perilous trip that Marcus Whitman undertook. It was a race against time. Public opinion was rapidly crystalizing into a judgment that the Oregon country was not worth claiming, much less worth fighting for; that, even though it could be acquired against the insistence of Great Britain, it would prove to be a liability rather than an asset.

Feared Oregon as Liability.

It is with sheer amazement that we now read the declarations of the leading men of that period. So good an American, so sturdy a frontiersman, so willing a fighter, as General Jackson, shook his head ominously in fear lest the national domain should get too far outspread, and warned the country that its safety "lay in a compact government." Senator McDuffie of South Carolina declared he "would not give a pinch of snuff for the whole territory," and expressed the wish that the Rocky Mountains were "an impassable barrier."

Senator Dayton of New Jersey said that, with very limited exceptions, "the whole country was as irreclaimable and barren a waste as the Sahara Desert," and that malaria had carried away most of its native population. Even so far-seeing and stanch an advocate as Senator Interests as Thomas Benton protested that the ridge of the Rockies should be made our western boundary, and avowed that "on the highest peak the statue of the fabled god Terminus should be erected, never to be thrown down."

Webster, although not definitely antagonistic, was uninterested and lukewarm. Years before he had pronounced Oregon "a barren, worthless country, fit only for wild beasts and wild men," and he was not one who changed opinions readily. But neither was Whitman one easily dismayed. Encouraged by the manifest friendliness of President Tyler, he portrayed with vivid eloquence the salubrity of the climate, the fertility of the soil, the magnitude of the forests, the evidences of ore in the mountains, and the splendor of the wide valleys drained by the great rivers. And he did not hesitate to speak plainly, as one who knew, even like the prophet Daniel.

Explorer Wins Tyler.

"Mr. Secretary," he declared, "you would better give all New England for the cod and mackerel fisheries of Newfoundland than to barter away Oregon."

Then, turning to the President in conclusion, he added quietly but beseechingly:

"All I ask is that you will not barter away Oregon or allow English interference until I can lead a band of stalwart American settlers across the plains. For this I shall try to do."

The manly appeal was irresistible. He sought only the privilege of proving his faith. The just and considerate Tyler could not refuse.

"Dr. Whitman," he rejoined, sympathetically, "your long ride and frozen limbs testify to your courage and your patriotism. Your credentials establish your character. Your request is granted."

Whitman's strategy was true statesmanship. Substantial occupation would make good the claim of the United States, and that was what he had initiated during his few days in St. Louis. A few months later he had completed an organization of eager souls, and led the first movement by wagon train across plains and mountains along this unblazed trail.

The First Caravan.

What a sight that caravan must have appeared to the roaming savages! And what an experience for the intrepid pioneers!

More than 200 wagons, bearing well-nigh a thousand emigrants, made up the party. They traveled by substantially the same route that Whitman had taken when he first went out to Oregon; from a rendesvous near what is now Kansas City they moved due northwest across Northeast Kansas and Southeast Nebraska to the Platte River; followed the Platte to the middle of what is now Wyoming, thence crossing the mountains by way of the Sweetwater Valley and the South Platte; and from Fort Hall, following the well-known route, roughly paralleling the Snake River, into Oregon.

The difficulties of the trip, involving beside the 200 wagons, the care of women and children, and of considerable herds of live stock, were such that its successful accomplishment seems almost miraculous.

But stern determination triumphed, and the result was conclusive. American leaders settled the country. The country belonged to them because they had taken it; and in the end the boundary settlement was made on the line of the forty-ninth parallel, your great Northwest was salved, and a veritable empire was merged in the young Republic.

Civilization Follows the Missionary.

Never in the history of the world has there been a finer example of civilization following Christianity. The missionaries led under the banner of the cross, and the settlers moved close behind, under the star-spangled symbol of the nation. Among all the records of evangelizing effort as the forerunner of human advancement, there is none so impressive as this of the early Oregon mission and its marvelous consequences.

To the men and women of that early day whose first thought was to carry the gospel to the Indians—to the Lees, the Spauldings, the Grays, the Walkers, the Leslies, to Fathers De Smet and Blanchet and De Mers, and to all the others of that glorious company who found that in serving God they were also serving their country, and their fellowmen—to them we pay today our tribute; to them we owe a debt of gratitude which we can never pay, save partially through recognition such as you have accorded it today.

We may reasonably do more today than rejoice in possession of the imperial domain which they revealed, and the life they made possible to the virile, aspiring and confident Northwest; I find new assurances in recalling the heroism, the resolution, the will to conquer of these pioneers.

The Covered Wagon's Trail.

I wish I might more effectively visualize them. Not very long ago I saw the covered wagon in the moving picture. I sat entranced. There was more than the picturesque, more than sorrow and discouragement, more than appealing characters and enthralling heroism. There was more than the revelation of the irresolute who failed in fitness to survive, more than tragedy and comedy in their inseparable blend. There was more than the scouts who surpassed our fancies, more than nature's relentless barriers revealed. Everywhere aflame was the soul of unsliterable purpose and the commanding sturdiness of elemental greatness. Still more, there was determination to do themselves, not asking the Government to do, but for Government only to sanction or permit.

Much the same spirit was revealed in the making of the Central West, where the determined pioneers builded in the confidence which they had in themselves. They battled with nature and every obstacle which they encountered, heroes perished without fame's acclaim, and they conquered and wrote big their part in the making of the greater Republic. Their victory proclaimed the strength of resolute purpose, and the human genius, confident in itself and eager to achieve on its own account.

Test of Self-Reliant Citizenship.

The lesson cannot fail to impress itself. In this test of self-reliant citizenship there came the rugged, militant, wholesome West. Greater things were wrought, larger accomplishment was recorded, greater victory was won in this wholesome, inspiring individualism than will ever attend paternalism or Government assumption of the tasks which are the natural inheritance of the builders who may better serve for themselves. Government may well provide opportunity, but the worth-while accomplishment is the privilege and the duty of men.

I thank you from my heart for permitting me to participate in doing homage to those brave souls. I rejoice particularly in the opportunity afforded me of voicing my appreciation, both as President of the United States, and as one who honestly tries to be a Christian soldier, of the signal service of the martyred Whitman. And finally, as just a human being, I wish I could find words to tell you how glad I am to see you all, and, reflecting as you do, from untroubled eyes, the happiness of spirit breathed by your own best song:

There are no worlds to conquer—
Gone is the last frontier
And the steady grind of the wagon-train
Of the sturdy pioneer.
But their memories live like a thing divine,
Treasured in Heaven above,
For the Trail that led to the storied West

ALLIED ENVOYS FAIL TO SATISFY BRITISH

can be found only in the united action of all the Allies," said one British official tonight. "If we acted separately what assurance could we give Germany that she would be safe from interference by France?"

This official likened independent action by Great Britain to that of a person taking a lease on a house where there was no security, and where a stream of lava might destroy the structure at any moment.

The general feeling in London tonight is that a settlement of the problem which is paralyzing the whole economic and industrial life of Europe is no further advanced than it was a month ago, and that no basis for a real agreement can be reached until the Premiers and Foreign Ministers of all the allied powers have a full and frank heart-to-heart talk at a general conference.

THEUNIS EXPOUNDS POLICY OF BELGIUM

Copyright, 1923, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, July 3.—Baron Moncheur, the Belgian Ambassador to London, was today instructed by the Government to deliver to Lord Curzon the reply of Belgium to the questions asked by the British Government on the occupation of the Ruhr and passive resistance.

The Ministerial declaration was read to the Chamber this afternoon by Premier Theunis. Practically all the Deputies were in the House and the galleries were crowded.

M. Theunis spoke of the necessity for a calm attitude.

"One thing," he said, "dominates our policy, and that is the economic and financial situation, which is itself governed by the necessity of obtaining from Germany the reparations she owes us. Any Government with a sense of its responsibility must take that situation into account."

The declaration announced that the Government purposed military service of twelve months, with two supplementary months during occupation of the Ruhr. In connection with the reparations problem the declaration stated:

"We intend, as hitherto, to exhibit as much of moderation as of firmness in defense of the rights and interests of Belgium. The Government will exercise the greatest energy in repression of the cowardly and odious crime of which numbers of our soldiers have just been the victims and which has aroused the indignation of the civilized world.

"The legitimacy of reparations has never ceased to be recognized, alike by the Allies and by the Germans themselves. We have been obliged to resort to pressure to compel Germany to carry out her just obligations. We shall continue that pressure so long as we have not received satisfaction.

"The Government will persevere in the efforts it has made to re-establish between the Allies that agreement which alone can hasten a definite solution of the question so vital to Belgium."

Paul Hymans, Liberal, in a long speech expressed his confidence in the Government. Referring to its foreign policy, M. Hymans said:

"The Ruhr policy is not a policy of aggression. It is founded on the reparation problem, which is a burden on Europe. It is important that an acceptable and practical formula should be found. It is not possible to enter into negotiations with Germany so long as she encourages, excites and remunerates criminal agitation.

"Meantime conversations must be held between the Allies and agreement reestablished. Here the Belgian Government has the leading rôle to play. That rôle is dictated by the traditional goodwill of the country. The help of England is indispensable to a solution of the reparation problem. Our foreign policy must depend on England and France."

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 3.—Europe is certainly very sick today and her malady must be prevented from becoming chronic, is how officials at the Foreign Ministry summed up the Ruhr situation for THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent.

The Italian Foreign Ministry, while making no attempt to hide the gravity of the present moment, is hopeful that a way out may be found. To the mind of the officials, the most urgent and most important problem is to get the Allies to agree to a common policy toward Germany, because they feel sure that Germany could not long resist if her morale were not supported by the divergencies of opinion among the Allies which have always existed.

The situation, they say, is not any worse now than it was six months ago, or even two years ago. The only difference is that what was then going on below the surface is now happening in the light of day and is obvious to every one.

Despite Premier Poincaré's speech to the French Senate, which is here held to have greatly strengthened France's Nationalists and intransigeant spirit, and thus to have rendered a solution difficult, the Italian diplomatists believe that an agreement between England, France, Italy and Belgium will be reached on the basis of the memorandum which Premier Mussolini presented in London last December.

That document, as was reiterated by Signor Mussolini in the Council of Ministers today, still represents Italian official thought on reparations.

SARRE COMMISSION CALLED TO ACCOUNT

Council Summons It to Geneva Instead of Sending Investigators Into Valley.

CECIL SAYS LEAGUE RULES

French See "Victory," However, In Lord Robert's Forceful but Moderate Course.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 3.—Instead of sending a commission into the Sarre Valley to study and report on conditions, it was decided today by the Council of the League of Nations that an "examination" be made of the situation by summoning to Geneva all members of the Governmental Commission of the Sarre and hearing their reports and explanations. This alteration of what was supposed to be the British intention is attributed by the French to the effect of conversations which took place last evening between Lord Robert Cecil, the British representative, and Gabriel Hanotaux, representative of France.

Certainly the French delegation today is expressing its high satisfaction with the turn which events have taken, and French newspaper correspondents here are telegraphing home to their newspapers messages which can be read to mean a French victory. Debate on the question was as important as the resulting resolution, and in that Lord Robert Cecil managed to say all that anybody of inquiry, whether in the Sarre or here, could say. The text of his discourse was that the Governing Commission in the Sarre must constantly remember that they are employed by the League of Nations and responsible to the League of Nations, and not to any one Government. He asked that the inquiry be a serious one.

Both in the mildness of the tone with which he made this request and in the tribute he paid to the way in which the commission was managing an extraordinarily difficult task, however, Lord Robert showed that he did not intend to make the council room a scene for national disputes, but a real board of international deliberators working together for the dignity and development of the League. This attitude was what surprised the French. They had imagined that Lord Robert intended to make the Sarre question echo any difference which may exist between British and French Cabinets about the Ruhr. Instead of that they found that his only concern was that the League should be in fact, as it is in name, a responsible body for the Government of the Sarre, and that it should bear its responsibilities in such a way as to bring it credit and not criticism. In doing this the British representative did not omit to criticise many actions of the Sarre Commission, which have been so much discussed, including the presence of French troops, replacing the mark with the franc and so on.

SYMBOL OF HAPPINESS

There was a time when the Turkish marriage ceremony included a coffee vow,

The bridegroom swearing never to refuse or to neglect to give his bride coffee,

And the breaking of this vow was considered a sufficient cause for divorce.

Evidently coffee was then just what it is today at CHILDS—the symbol of happiness.

Invitingly fragrant, delightfully stimulating and enriched with milk and cream, there is joy in every cup.

FRENCH TROOPS NOW OCCUPY WESTHOFEN

BIG FINE FOR BOMB CRIME

Belgium Mulcts Duisburg in 20,000,000,000 Paper Marks—Honors Victims at Funeral.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUSSELDORF, July 3.—The French today occupied Westhofen, northeast of Hagen, on the main Berlin-Frankfort Railroad line, which can now therefore be cut at will. The official announcement made here says that the measure was taken because the French patrols which occupied the territory in the Westhofen district were continually sniped at from across the frontier.

This morning 6,500,000,000 marks were seized by gendarmes at Langwerche, near Dusben. The money, according to the French, was intended for purposes of passive resistance.

The funeral of the Belgian soldiers killed in the bomb outrage at Duisburg took place in the chapel of the military hospital at Crefeld this morning.

General Rucroy, having in the name of King Albert conferred the posthumous honor of the Belgian Order of the Crown on the victims and placed the emblem on each coffin, made a short speech, recalling how they had fallen in their country's cause not as a soldier might expect to fall, but by the deed of a cowardly assassin at the moment they were peacefully returning home to visit their families.

Followed by a long cortège the bodies were then taken through Crefeld to a church where mass was said before they were placed on the train for Belgium. With the Belgian Commanding Generals walked General Degoutte, his Chief of Staff, General Somemer, Quartermaster General Meyer and several hundred French and Belgian officers, followed by detachments of troops representing all arms of both countries. The British also sent two officers.

DUISBURG, July 3.—Dr. Ludwig Most, technical adviser of the Duisburg Chamber of Commerce, is among the twenty hostages arrested by the Belgian authorities here in retaliation for the bomb outrage on June 30. Dr. Most recently returned from an extensive trip in the United States.

BRUSSELS, July 3 (Associated Press).—The Minister of Defense has imposed a fine 20,000,000,000 paper marks on the town of Duisburg on account of recent crimes there.

ESSEN, July 3 (Associated Press).—The finished products worth millions of dollars, and consisting chiefly of machinery and other iron and steel manufactured articles, which have been seized in the Ruhr under General Degoutte's decree are to remain under guard for the present in the plants where they were requisitioned, it was announced by the French authorities today. Just what disposition will eventually be made of these goods has not yet been decided.

The French take the view that if the products were thrown upon the open international market for sale, a slump in prices on the British and American markets would immediately result. The stocks seized represent practically the entire output of the Ruhr industries since the French occupation began early in January, as the manufacturers have been unable to export their products and have been storing them.

CLOSING OF FRONTIERS CAUSES HARDSHIPS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COLOGNE, July 3.—The hasty French decision to close the "frontier" between occupied and unoccupied territory is already bearing fruit.

From frontier towns come accounts of amazing scenes of unfortunate travelers being stranded in thousands, crowding hotels, private homes, hospitals and even outhouses, many having to sleep on station platforms.

Much confusion seems to exist among the French posts as well as among the travelers. In Hengsty yesterday every one was turned out of the trains. The same thing happened at Vohwinckel, but subsequently the order there was rescinded and it was stated that up to 2 o'clock this morning travelers would be allowed to pass. At passengers for the British zone were all turned out of the train, however, at Hengsty before it reached Vohwincked this alteration was of little assistance.

Today the French are refusing to let any Germans through either station. They have taken similar measures at Wipperfurth, Lenep and other branch line stations on the British frontier. The side roads were of course blocked long ago by the French with trenches, barbed wire entanglements or felled trees, and the main roads are watched by control posts. Many additional posts of patrols are reported to have been set up at the intervening spots with the object of keeping the whole countryside under observation.

In the industrial areas of the frontier the Ruhr barrier is interfering with the arrival of workmen living on one side of the river at factories situated on the other. In the Belgian zone, where all street traffic except that of foot passengers was prohibited, the roads today were crowded with people carrying sacks of potatoes, vegetables and other foodstuffs which could not be transported otherwise.

The prohibition of all wheeled traffic in Duisburg and the adjacent important port of Ruhrort is said by the Germans to threaten seriously the distribution of foodstuffs to the surrounding area from the sheds and warehouses of Ruhrort.

The worst effect of this new order is the impetus it gives to the steady approach of industrial chaos in the occupied territory by its interference with traders and manufacturers. Naturally in these days, when, as the French themselves report, one great plant works after another is closing down for lack of coal and hundreds of small firms have no raw material and can pay their employes only by means of gold from the Ruhr aid fund, it is only as a result of delicate adjustment among the larger concerns that it is possible to find something to keep the workmen from sheer idleness.

Some concerns are already even reduced to having hundreds of men do little more than transport materials from one storage shed to another and back again.

The cutting off of business men from travel facilities must obviously increase the general confusion, but the British are beginning to issue emergency passes which it is hoped the French posts will recognise.

Financial circles are likewise seriously affected by the new trend of affairs. Today there were signs of a new currency crisis in Cologne, affecting the British as well as the German banks. Some of the former were obliged to refuse to cash all except military checks and limit their payment for the latter to the equivalent of 10 shillings in marks.

This shortage is believed to be due not so much to the new barrier as to the fact that the French seize all Reichsbank money discovered passing through their posts, although intended for the British zone. Money to meet the requirements of the army, it is thought, because a military escort accompanies it from Berlin.

Without Haggling—Quality Pianos at Lowest Prices

Curiously enough the ONE PRICE idea that began to come into American storekeeping with the development of the Wanamaker business did not apply to PIANOS, and this Store again had to make the fight for one price when it began selling pianos in 1899. Even today piano prices are broken in many stores, either openly or by making extra large allowances on old instruments taken in exchange. BUT NOT AT WANAMAKER'S. Here the price is always unchangeably the lowest to everybody, and our allowance on old pianos is on a basis of NO PROFIT TO US, but a great convenience to you. A small sum down brings the instrument to your home where you may enjoy it while paying for it—a small sum each month.

In the tops of some of the silk stockings in the Hosiery Shop the number Forty-four is plainly stamped.

80-FOOT POLE FALLS AMID 20 CHILDREN

PLAYMATES SAVE OTHERS

Drag Many to Safety as Timber Supporting Clothes Lines Crashes Among Them.

More than a score of young children were playing in the stone-paved yard of the tenement house at 325 Pearl Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, when an eighty-foot pole used as a support for clothes lines snapped and fell in their midst.

Willie La Rossa, 6 years, was struck on the head by the end of the pole and is in a dying condition in Cumberland Street Hospital. Harriet Goldfinger, the same age, is in the same institution with injuries to the side and leg. Her condition is said not to be serious. Both children lived at that address.

Many acts of heroism were performed by children of tender years in dragging their younger playmates from the path of the falling pole. Nicholas Iasecolo, 14, of 327 Pearl Street, put his arms around three children, between 5 and 7 years of age, and swept them out of danger. Herman Groubes, 10, of 323 Pearl Street, seized Harriet Goldfinger, and at the risk of his own life succeeded in dragging her so far that she received only a glancing blow from the big timber.

The noise of the falling pole and the screams of the children aroused the dwellers in the neighborhood, and the yard where the accident happened was soon filled with excited parents looking for their children. Mrs. La Rossa, mother of Willie, was at the window of her apartment when the pole fell. She ran to the yard and hugged her boy to her breast when the pole was lifted sufficiently to pull him from under it.

An ambulance was summoned and the two small victims taken to the hospital. Policemen from the Poplar Street Station quieted the excited gathering at the scene of the accident and began an investigation to determine the cause.

Morgenthau Boy Getting Better.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 3.—The condition of Henry Morgenthau 3d, six-year-old grandson of the former Ambassador to Turkey, was reported to be greatly improved today at the Vassar Brother Hospital here, where he is suffering from injuries received on Sunday. The boy was thrown from his pony while riding on the estate of his father, Henry Morgenthau Jr.

METZ TESTIMONY IN CHEMICAL SUIT

Misrepresented in Reports of the Trial, He Tells The Associated Press.

RETRACTION BY ONE PAPER

Facts Regarding His Testimony Brought Out in a Statement by Assistant Attorney General.

Colonel Herman A. Metz, who has been a witness in the suit of the Government against the Chemical Foundation, Inc., at Wilmington, Del., declares that his testimony has been grossly misrepresented. In a statement to the Associated Press he said:

"The Morning News of Wilmington, Del., on June 26, 1923, published an article purporting to give my testimony as a witness for the Government in the suit of the United States against the Chemical Foundation, Inc.

"This article stated in effect that I had paid money to German spies, one of whom was under indictment as a fugitive from justice, for information extracted from War Department files and used by United States Senator Moses in a Senatorial dye investigation.

"On June 27, 1923, the Wilmington News published a complete retraction of this article, stating among other things that their previous publications to the effect above stated were false in every particular, and further that they were neither reproductions of the testimony nor fair paraphrases thereof.

"They also stated that their representative was not at the trial; that the testimony as printed in The News was not given at the trial; that I did not admit that I had paid any person shown by the testimony to be a German spy any sum of money whatever; that I had never employed any person charged with being a German spy to get any information from the War Department, and that there was no testimony given that the persons named in the article were German spies.

"Although counsel for the defendant charged in court that I was the invisible plaintiff in the suit and had instigated the Government's action, I swore that I was in Europe when President Harding demanded the return of the patents and that I had never discussed with any official of the Government the matter of the present suit. Assistant United States Attorney General Henry W. Anderson, during the trial at Wilmington, offered in evidence a large number of communications addressed to me by Secretary Bryan, Secretary Lansing, Ambassador Gerard, Ambassador Page and other Government officials for the purpose of showing that all my actions in connection with the dyestuff situation were undertaken and carried out with the full knowledge of the Government and by their advice and sanction.

"On June 30 Colonel Henry W. Anderson, Assistant Attorney General, made the following statement to the Court concerning myself, which I have not seen printed in any newspaper:

"'The character, standing, loyalty, integrity and every other quality that this witness possesses was attacked on cross-examination, and the witness was with counsel acting well within his legal rights, and therefore I am not complaining, restricted to a very limited reply as to those questions.

"'It is not only the right of the Government, but that which is due in fairness to the witness himself, to let the facts as fully as I know them to be brought out, so that the testimony of the witness may be complete for the consideration of the Court. This man is engaged in a large business. I say again, counsel, acting within his rights, attacked this witness and his credibility and his character and loyalty with a severity that I do not recall having before witnessed, and the evidence already in this case justifies in my judgment the statement that this is but a part of a long continued controversy.

"'These things, unless the full facts are brought out as far as one can on sudden notice of this kind, are liable to do irreparable injury to an individual when there is no redress, because these things done in a court of justice afford no defense. Therefore, while I deem all of that matter as immaterial, and have so stated, those questions having been gone into, in my judgment, it is my duty to the full extent that I or I should not have a chance to do so to bring out every fact in order that the whole picture may be observed, because on cross-examination a witness is not allowed to talk, he is not allowed to explain, he is not allowed to tell his motives; he is just pinned down to practically bare statements and half proof.'"

Although THE TIMES did not publish the article cited, it feels that Colonel Metz is entitled to the publication of the above statement as a means of correcting any misapprehension that may have been created.

President Harding's tribute to "The Covered Wagon"

"Not very long ago I saw 'The Covered Wagon' in the moving picture. I sat entranced. There was more than the picturesque, more than sorrow and discouragement, more than appealing characters and enthralling heroism. There was more than the revelation of the irresolute, who failed in fitness to survive, more than tragedy and comedy in their inseparable blend. There was more than the scouts who surpassed our fancies, more than nature's relentless barriers revealed. Everywhere aflame was the soul of unalterable purpose and the commanding sturdiness of elemental greatness.

"Much the same spirit was revealed in the making of the Central West, where the determined pioneers builded in the confidence which they had in themselves. They battled with nature and every obstacle which they encountered, heroes perished without fame's acclaim, and they conquered and wrote big their part in the making of the greater Republic. Their victory proclaimed the strength of resolute purpose, and the human genius, confident in itself and eager to achieve on its own account.

"The lesson cannot fail to impress itself. In this test of self-reliant citizenship there came the rugged, militant, wholesome West. Greater things were wrought, larger accomplishment was recorded, greater victory was won in this wholesome, inspiring individualism than will ever attend paternalism or government assumption of the tasks which are the natural inheritance of the builders who may better serve for themselves."

TO ACCUSE ENRIGHT BEFORE GOVERNOR

libel on information lodged with the District Attorney of the County of New York on complaint of Commissioner of Police Richard E. Enright, and said charges are now being heard before the Hon. Thomas T. C. Crain as a Justice of the Court of General Sessions, sitting as a City Magistrate, and the evidence that I have as to my justification, or any statement, either spoken or written, in regard to malfeasance and misfeasance of Commissioner Enright as Police Commissioner shall be presented to the Court at the proper time; this investigation has been adjourned until August 14th, when it will be resumed.

The insolent attitude of Commissioner Enright in denouncing the Courts of Justice, Legislators and other public officials who happen to know of his inefficiency as a Police Commissioner warrants an investigation by you as to his fitness for this office. I am ready and willing at any time to prefer charges against him before you on the evidence I have in my possession.

I remain,

Yours very respectfully,
LOUIS A. CUVILLIER,
Member of the Assembly,
20th Assembly District,
New York County.

*NOTE: Under the Mullen-Gage Prohibition Law.

Hadn't Reached the Governor.

Before starting for the theatre last night Governor Smith said that he had received no communication from Mr. Cuvillier.

When asked for further details as to his probable course of action Mr. Cuvillier said: "I appreciate as a lawyer that the Governor should have specifications, so that he can, if he feels that an investigation is warranted in the interest of the people of the city, either investigate himself or appoint a commission. I am now defendant in a judicial proceeding in which I am charged with criminal libel, and the facts that I have I intend to present to the court when Magistrate Corrigan has completed his defense. I am ready, however, to submit the evidence I have to the Governor."

Regarding the assertion of Commissioner Enright in his letter to the Mayor on Monday that he had authoritative information that the "legal expenses of one of the defendants in this case is being paid by a New York newspaper," Mr. Cuvillier said:

"My counsel is Martin Conboy. Mr. Conboy's fees are being paid out of my own pocket. I am hoping that the Legislature will reimburse me for my defense of my legislative privileges."

John D. Lindsay, counsel for Magistrate Corrigan, characterized Commissioner Enright's statement as an "absolute fabrication." "Magistrate Corrigan has made his legal fight unaided by anybody," he said. "The statement is too absurd to make any comment upon."

Enright Suspends Detectives.

Commissioner Enright announced the suspension of Morrison and Lambert shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At 1:30 Peter A. McLaughlin, the stenographer who took down the testimony, submitted to the Commissioner a copy of the testimony before Judge Crain, and the Commissioner turned it over to Chief Inspector William J. Lahey. Inspector Lahey then recommended that charges of testifying falsely be preferred against the two detectives. It was announced that such charges would be drawn at once, and that the two men would be brought to trial before the Commissioner immediately.

Morrison is now attached to the West 20th Street station and Lambert to the East Twenty-second Street station. At the time of the so-called Petrucci incident, which resulted in charges that the driver of a truck carrying liquor declared that it belonged to former Police Inspector Alfred W. Thor, Inspector John O'Brien and Captain John W. O'Connor, Lambert and Morrison were attached to the West Thirtieth Street station and worked as partners. After denying before Judge Crain that they knew anything about the stopping of the truck they recanted and admitted that they had stopped it; that the driver said it was for "high police officials," and that Morrison had subsequently been warned over the telephone from some one in Room 305 at Police Headquarters to "lay off" Petrucci, said to be interested in the liquor, or they would get into trouble.

District Attorney Banton was asked if he had made any recommendations to Commissioner Enright with regard to the two detectives.

"I am not running the Police Department," he said. "I have a big enough job on my hands to mind my own department."

Mr. Banton made public two letters. The first was a reply to Commissioner Enright's letter calling attention to a statement by Mr. Cuvillier that the police graft under the Miller-Gage law amounted to between $300,000 and $600,000 a year and asking that Mr. Cuvillier be subpoenaed in an inquiry into the charges.

"My first impression is that this matter should be held in abeyance until the hearings before Judge Crain are resumed," Mr. Banton said in his reply.

The other letter was to Mr. Cuvillier in reply to the charge of a specific case of police oppression, in which the Assemblyman declared a negro was barred from his home by the police after a raide. The letter said:

"Replying again to your letter of June 22, in which you complain of the actions of the police in connection with the tenancy of one Cox at 45 East 135th Street, I beg to state that a conviction was had in this case yesterday in the Fifth District Magistrate's Court, which is about the best answer that can be given to your statement that the case was one of a police frame-up.

"As long as I am District Attorney I will aid the police in every way in evicting any person who attempts to make an immoral use of tenement property."

Commissioner Hirshfield, in his statement that he intended to resume his police inquiry after Judge Crain had complete dthe present inquiry, said:

"The attacks in the newspapers on policemen because of alleged brutality is doing no good and has resulted in making the police afraid to arrest criminals. Criminals know of these attacks and of the effect on the police and take advantage of it by setting up the cry of police brutality and frame-up every time they are caught. As a result of these newspaper stories the police get out of the way rather than make an arrest.

"When Gaynor was Mayor a similar situation existed, with the resultant demorilization of the police, and it then became necessary for Mayor Gaynor to warn the public that the police should be supported and not the criminal. He pointed out the danger to the community if the morale of the police force were shattered and the criminals given the upper hand.

"So far in the investigation before Judge Crain not a scintilla of evidence has been adduced to support the charges against the police made by Magistrate Corrigan and Assemblyman Cuvillier. Now, realizing that they have fallen flat, they are seeking to induce Governor Smith to order a legislative probe where they can get publicity for their accusations without being required to prove them.

"I thought the investigation before Judge Crain was for the purpose of probing the charge that one-half of the police force are bootleggers, that large amounts of graft are collected by them, and that the Police Commissioner got part of it. Nothing has yet been offered to support those charges, and as soon as the hearings before Judge Crain cease I intend to resume my investigation, discontinued because I did not want to interfere with a judicial investigation."

Cuts and Wounds

ZONITE is the same form of antiseptic that was adopted by the Allied surgeons to prevent infection in the terrible wounds of war.

A few drops of the antiseptic promptly applied to any break of the skin is a safeguard against the germs that cause blood poisoning and other dangerous infections.

Zonite is non-poisonous and non-irritating. It has greater germicidal power than pure Carbolic Acid, yet is perfectly safe to use.

DEMPSEY CONFIDENT ON EVE OF BATTLE

But Refuses to Make Flat Statement That He Will Knock Out Gibbons Today.

EXPECTS A HARD CONTEST

SPENDS LAST DAY QUIETLY

Titleholder Will Leave Great Falls for Shelby This Morning—Training Camp Dismantled.

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 3.—An atmosphere of desolation pervaded the training camp of Jack Dempsey here today. Great Falls Park, discarded for two years, but remodeled to serve as the place where Dempsey could condition himself for the defense of his world's heavyweight championship against Tom Gibbons, has served its purpose. The scene was typical of the time between prohibition raids in 1921, which closed the place as a beer garden and the moment when Dempsey took temporary possession—not a sign of life outdoors, only the help indoors.

Dempsey spent most of the day away from his living quarters, out in the open air, walking about the rough country, enjoying the invigorating air and that relaxation which is so essential to a boxer on the eve of a ring battle.

In the morning Dempsey went off on a hike soon after breakfast. He returned in time to enjoy a short rest before luncheon and after the midday meal lounged about for a while. Then he went motoring with Mike Trant and some Chicago friends and did not return until 5 o'clock, half an hour before dinner time.

No change was noted in the champions mental attitude. He was his usual good-natured self. Evidently his bout with Gibbons was causing him no worry. The champion is not given to braggadocio. He still refused to make a flat statement that he would knock out Gibbons. He spoke on generalities—said simply that he would do his best.

"In Great Shape," Says Dempsey.

"Gibbons may prove tougher than a lot of people think," said the champion. "I am not one who regards him lightly. I regard no challenger for my title lightly. They're all dangerous until they are stowed away. I'll make every effort to beat Gibbons. I'll knock him out if I can, but you must remember that I will not be the only man in the ring. I'll do my best. That's all. If my best falls short, then the people will hail a new champion. Anything is liable to happen in a boxing ring. A lot of unexpected things are possible. I have taken every precaution that I thought necessary to equip myself against the unexpected. I am in great shape—feel better than I have in many years on the day before the bout. I am ready to do my stuff. I am confident That's all."

The adjustment of the financial matters which have beset the bout has produced a feeling of relief in the champion today, although he does not seriously concern himself with the business side of a contest. That is the task of his manager, Jack Kearns. Any of the woe Dempsey unfavorably affected by the complicated, confusing situation which threatened the bout up to the last minute.

He never lets business interfere with his training. He depends on Kearns to shoulder all problems save those inside the ring. Dempsey's treatment of the situation with regard to the business side of the approaching bout was humorous. He was undisturbed while the holding of the bout was in doubt.

"We've certainly had a lot of fun with this bout, particularly you newspaper men, who had to chase around all the time and didn't know from one minute to the next whether the bout was on or off," was the way Dempsey treated the subject.

Dempsey plans to leave here for Shelby on the 7 o'clock train tomorrow morning. He will enjoy the seclusion of a private car, making the trip surrounded only by the members of his training camp crew. Kearns was in Shelby today. He left on the morning train to engage in the work in supervising things in order to secure his last $100,000 out of the gate money.

Tomorrow night Dempsey will return to his camp to spend his last night there. The champion plans to leave for home Thursday morning unless something develops to keep him here until Friday morning.

Signs of Quick Departure.

Signs of a quick departure after the bout were visible at the camp today. The outdoor ring has been dismantled and the canvas thrown up to keep out the vision of those who would not pay admission to the training workouts cut down. The outdoor bag-punching platform has been removed, the ring ropes have been carefully laid aside awaiting packing in huge boxes on the side porch and the indoor gymnasium demolished.

Many of Dempsey's personal effects already have been shipped off. The champion's collection of four-legged friends, a wolf, a Persian kitten, the cow and the bull, along with Jerry, Dempsey's bulldog, all will be shipped to the titleholder's Salt Lake City home as fast as shipment can be made.

The expected favorable reaction to the announcement that the bout would be held, following a previous definite statement by Kearns that the match was off, did not materialize here this afternoon. There were no signs of unusual activity with regard to the bout, no brisk last-minute rush to purchase tickets. Everything seemed to be the same, with the possible exception of the spectacle of small boys about the streets offering official bout programs for sale at 25 cents each. Even this was not exciting, the sales being negligible.

After what the bout has gone through, it is not reasonable to expect anybody to be in high glee over the news that the bout has been salvaged. Nobody seems to care much whether the contest is on or off, if outward indications count for anything. The bout seems destined to be a big failure from a business viewpoint.

Major J. Eugene Lane of Lewistown, who got out of bed early this morning in a successful last-minute attempt to have Kearns reconsider his announcement that the bout was off, left for Shelby this morning to resume his rôle of trustee for the latest committee identified with the finances. Lane said at 8 o'clock this morning he was prepared to remain at training until he was kicked out. He intends to stay in Shelby until after the bout.

An indication of the general lack of interest in the bout is furnished in the small amount of betting on the outcome. No large wagers have been reported as circulating. Dempsey is the favorite at odds of 7 to 5, but there is no general rush to place bets at these odds. For the most part wagers on the outcome are small. There is little Gibbons support, few people conceding him much of a chance to win.

Advantages of Each Boxer As Shown by Measurements

Height—Dempsey, ¼ of an inch.
Weight—Dempsey, 19 pounds.
Reach—Gibbons, 1 inch.
Neck—Each man 17 inches.
Chest, normal—Each man 41 inches.
Chest, expanded—Gibbons, ½ an inch.
Waist—Dempsey, 2½ inches smaller.
Biceps—Dempsey, 1 inch.
Forearm—Each man 12½ inches.
Wrist—Gibbons, ¾ of an inch.
Thigh—Gibbons, ¼ an inch.
Calf—Dempsey, ½ an inch.
Ankle—Gibbons, ½ an inch.

BEER SIGNS APPEAR ON SHELBY STREETS

Have "Near" Added in Tiny Letters—Women Adopt Male Attire—Other Sidelights.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—Perhaps two-thirds of the women seen on Shelby streets, natives or visitors, wear riding breeches. This is a tribute to the Shelby mud, however, or a concession to convenience. The moralists may be conciliated by the statement that a good many of these ladies, hindered by neither age nor weight, in their preference for male garments certainly do not put on the male garments for purposes of allurement. If they do, they don't get it over.

Beer and ale signs are reappearing on the streets, usually with the word "near" added in minute letters. Whether the word is there or not, it seems to be all near at present.

The power of the press in molding the artistic taste of the public has been proved again by the departure from town of one of the two tent shows, due to the fact that a number of dramatic critics and men of letters from New York and Chicago interested themselves in the rival collection of high-class comedians and did as much plugging for the show as they could. Each night used to see about a million dollars worth of literary talent selling peanuts in the tent show on Main Street and the populace turned out to see this great sight. There is some doubt whether the great sight was the great men or their strange Western clothes, which the ordinary citizen of Shelby never sees except in a rodeo.

The oil that was sprinkled on Shelby's streets a few days ago to lay the dust has pretty well soaked in and the brisk breezes that swept the town today carried gray-brown clouds everywhere. Outside the built-up district Shelby is an expanse of hard-baked gray mud, and the motor traffic tears this to pieces in no time. Tomorrow seems likely to be clear, hot and dusty, which is not very agreeable, but far from the worst sort of weather they have in Shelby.

The arena got a fight workout this afternoon when the Toole County Post of the Legion held a boxing program in it before several hundred spectators. As an arena it is good. Every seat holder can see well and hear well. Moreover the ushers today managed to prevent the crowd from smoking at all, either in the arena or within the barbed wire fence that surrounds it at a distance of a hundred feet or so. Whether they can do as well with the larger crowd tomorrow remains to be seen.

One shoe was laid, however, when the crowd this afternoon came down front to hear a song and the arena did not collapse under the impact of several hundred pairs of feet. The lumber is light and there had been small breaks in the boards here and there, but it seems to be strong enough to hold as much of a crowd as Shelby is likely to draw.

One drawback it certainly has, however, and that is that every board is full of splinters and by the time the fight is over every customer will be full of splinters too. Grass cushions are to be rented, but that won't save the hands.

Though all the surrounding country is theoretically marked off with streets and avenues, the part of town between Main Street and the arena is not marked off and the rutted automobile tracks run irregularly across the mule track. There is no danger that a pedestrian is likely to be in the way of any automobile, as it takes the cars some time to jounce over the hummocks and get near enough to hit the walkers. There have been no reports of accidents so far.

One thing that gladdens all hearts is the final removal of Jack Kearns and with him the financial, administrative and general news of the fight from Great Falls to Shelby. For the last week, since the financial crisis became acute, the mob of reporters covering the general news has had to shift back and forth daily, or rather nightly, from one town to the other. Great Falls is about 130 miles from Shelby and the run normally takes some three and a half hours, which is bad enough, but not so discouraging as the fact that the trains are inconveniently timed, arriving at 1 in the morning or leaving at 7 in the morning, and so on. There was a general shout of relief when it was realized that the Great Falls commuters' association could at last be dissolved.

In the feature bout of a boxing show held in the arena of the Toole County American Legion Post this afternoon, George Manley, a Denver light-heavyweight, knocked out Frankie Morahan of Butte in the third roundo f a scheduled eight-rouild contest. Marine Ranitzere of Great Falls also scored a knock-out over Eddie Shelton of Shelby in one porduct of Shelby, defeated Bill Wappan of Appleton, Wis., in a six-rounder. The other two bouts on the program resulted in a draw. About 2,000 persons attended the show.

Shelby has the appearanceo f a busy arena behind the front lines tonight. There is a steady stream of dust-covered cars passing through the unwetn streets and a half dozen airplanes circle overhead. To make the similarity more complex, there is the occasional explosion of a cannon cracker.

A Scotch Highland band arrived in Shelby today just too late to chip in and raise than third $100,000 for Jack Kearns.

"It Shelby done" tomorrow or not at all.

TOM GIBBONS SEEMS TO BE OVERTRAINED

SPENDS THE DAY QUIETLY

Takes Short Walk in Morning and Then Rests at Home—Wife Will Not See the Bout.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—There was one man in Shelby today who was not bewildered by recent events in connection with the world's heavyweight championship bout. The man was Tommy Gibbons. He was the one serene and confident individual in the long list of actors who have played a part in Montana's great sporting tragedy. The only person in the whole muddled affair who is willingly taking a sporting chance—he goes ahead saying "That's fine" to whatever turns up and smiling his broad Irish smile.

Told this morning that Jack Kearns and his champion, Jack Dempsey, were going through with the bout without their third $100,000, Gibbons said: "That's great. I knew they would do the right thing. I appreciate their willingness to give me a chance." There was no affectation in the statement. It came from the heart and expressed what its author really felt.

Will Weigh 178.

"I will weigh 178 pounds tomorrow," he said. "That's enough; isn't it? I know exactly what I am going to do. It's all planned in my mind. I know, too, that I am going to win."

It is hard to beat that sort of confidence, but some of Gibbons's most intimate friends looked away over the hills when they heard him say that. Somehow public opinion has changed in this town in the last forty-eight hours. Perhaps it was the coming of the Dempsey camp followers or the vehement denials of recent reports that Dempsey was not in shape, or just the natural swing toward the champion on the eve of a title battle. Anyhow, the feeling that Dempsey will win has invaded this town for the first time, but it hasn't taken hold of Tommy Gibbons. When he said he was going to win he meant it. His confidence and courage have not wavered.

After luncheon Gibbons spent the remainder of the day at home. There was a "no visitors allowed" sign on the front gate, and Trainer Buck Pape was sitting on the doorstep to see that it was enforced. Despite that the challenger received several callers during the afternoon. Among them were Mrs. Raymond T. Baker, who was formerly Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, and some guests in her private car; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Catfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Armory and William A. Slater, all of New York City. Other visitors at the Gibbons home included Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Swift Jr., and their party from Chicago.

Gibbons turned in early again tonight. Tomorrow morning he will be examined at his home by Dr. R. G. Nelson, physician for the Toole County Boxing Commission, who also will examine Dempsey in the champion's private car as soon as he arrives in Shelby. Gibbons's wife will not go to the arena until shortly before 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. He will be accompanied only by his manager, Eddie Kane, and his trainer, Buck Pape. These two will be in the challenger's corner during the bout.

Wife Will Not See Bout.

Mrs. Gibbons will not see her husband fight for the championship. She says she would like very much to, but is afraid she would bring him bad luck. She had intended to remain at home with the children during the afternoon, but evidently the strain of having a challenger for the championship as a husband has begun to tell on her and today she changed her original plans.

"I feel that I should go crazy alone here with the children," she said, "and so I have arranged to go for an automobile ride during the afternoon. I don't know even which way I shall go, but I'll be back by the time Tom gets home and no matter how the fight ends there will be no difference in his welcome. Money is not everything in the world, and though I hope and believe he is going to beat Dempsey, he is a champion with me win or lose."

Mrs. Gibbons is a fatalist. She believes that if it is written her husband is to be the next champion of the world nothing can keep him from it, but that if it is not so written the only thing to do is to make the best of it. She said that Tom never talked about the bout at home, chiefly she thought because of the children, and that she had learned practically all that she knew about his intentions and feelings from his conversation with outsiders.

Sometimes, she said, she would ask him about some detail, or story that she had read in the papers, but Tom seemed disinclined to do more than answer her questions. She broke off at that point in the conversation to attend to some details in the preparation of her husband's lunch and to find out if the baby was still sleeping.

When she returned the talk drifted to what the family was going to do after the bout. It seems that all of them are anxious to get to their Summer home in Osakis, Minn. Tommy Sr. wants to go fishing and Tommy Jr. and his mother want to go swimming. They will leave Shelby on the night of July 5.

Rules Are Discussed.

The impression that a visitor carried away from the Gibbons home today was that the outcome of tomorrow's bout will have no great effect on any of them. The father and mother realize that there are more important things in this world than boxing championships, and as they talked of the bout their eyes followed the two boys playing in the yard.

While Gibbons rested and waited, every one else in this man's town prepared hurriedly for the fight. The Toole County Boxing Club, composed of members of the American Legion, under whose auspices the championship is being held, met tonight to go over the rules which will govern the bout.

Nothing of great importance was decided. The referee's decision will be absolute. There will be no holding and hitting and there will be one minute intermissions between rounds. Each of these points came up for discussion due to certain provisions in the State Boxing law, but they were decided, as was expected, in advance. In some bouts in this State there are two judges as well as the referee, but Referee Jim Dougherty will act alone tomorrow. Colonel Eurke of New Orleans, head of the National Boxing Association, will be chief timekeeper. The preliminary bouts will start promptly at 12 o'clock, mountain time; 3 P. M., New York time.

For the first time in the talk of the bout has shifted from finances to the relative merits of the two boxers and their chances, but so far as could be learned there was no betting on the outcome. Most of the citizens of Shelby spent their money long ago trying to bring the championship here. All they can do is to sit back and enjoy it, and it is to be hoped they get their money's worth.

AIRPLANES TO BRING PICTURES TO TIMES

Wide World Photos Arranges for Special Service From Shelby to New York.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO HELP

One of the Two Planes to Start Trip Will Fly Straight Across the Continent.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—A special airplane service will bring photographs of the fight taken by The Times Wide World Photos to New York so that readers of THE TIMES and of other papers which are customers of the Wide World Photos can get the pictures of the fight which takes place tomorrow afternoon in the Friday morning paper. As this involves night flying over difficult country a duplicate service has been arranged, one line covering part of the trip by special train while the other plane flies straight through from Shelby to New York.

In co-operation with the Newspaper Enterprise Association and the Pathe News, The Times Wide World Photos have rented three Curtis Oriole planes from the Curtiss company, two of which are now in Shelby. Airplane pictures of the fight and crowds, both movies and stills, will be taken from these planes, which have been instructed, however, in compliance with the order of State Fire Marshal Brooks, not to fly over the arena.

Inside the Arena TIMES photographers, mounted on a specially constructed elevated platform, will take pictures of the fight, which will be developed and printed in the Pullman car which houses The Times photographic staff, under J. V. Dumas and the Newspaper Enterprise Association. Duplicate prints will immediately be put aboard the two airplanes, which will be waiting in a field just across the track from the arena, and they will be sent out on the eastward trip.

The planes will fly in company to Williston, N. D., which should be reached about nightfall. As the hazard in night flying is considerable one of the planes will descend at Williston and put its packages of photographs on a special train waiting there, which will carry them across country to Norfolk, N. D., which should be reached at daybreak. There a third plane will be ready to take the photographs on east with stops at St. Paul, Chicago and Cleveland before New York. The first plane, meanwhile, will have flown on through the night and taken this route directly. It is expected that it will reach Chicago about 8 o'clock Thursday morning and New York 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

JOHNSON LIKES GIBBONS.

Former Champion Thinks Challenger Has Excellent Chance.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 3.—"Tom Gibbons has a wonderful chance to last fifteen rounds and if he does, mark my words, he will be the next heavyweight champion of the world," Jack Johnson, former titleholder, said here this afternoon.

Jack was elated when he learned that the fight was to go on. "I'm glad to see Tom get his chance," he said. "The first good man that comes along will get Jack, and get him good. Gibbons packs a punch in either hand and if he goes fifteen rounds he should earn the decision. He's much cleverer than Dempsey."

Johnson opened a training camp yesterday in the hope of staging a comeback. He said that he would challenge the winner at Shelby, although he admitted that he is 46 years old.

FIGHT RESULT BY RADIO.

Newark Station to Give Detailed Account of Dempsey Bout.

It was announced at L. Bamberger's radio broadcasting station, WOR, Newark, that the station was in direct communication with Shelby and that arrangements had been made whereby A. A. Falser will give a complete and detailed story of the Dempsey-Gibbons fight immediately after the last blow is struck.

According to the announcement this will be the only station in this vicinity which will broadcast the championship bout. The broadcasting will not start until after 6 P. M., New York time, as it is then that the fight starts.

GOVERNMENT TAKES CHARGE OF TICKETS

Writ of Attachment Sought by Shelby Oil Man Therefore Is Dismissed.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—Tickets, money and accounts of the Shelby fight now are in the hands of officials of the United States Internal Revenue Department by mutual agreement with Jack Kearns, John Slattery, United States District Attorney of Helena announced today. An attachment sought by Arthur Kelly, local oil man, therefore, could not be levied because Loy Molumby, named in the writ, is not the owner of the tickets and Kearns had already agreed to turn them over to Federal officers, Slattery said.

Officials of the fight were served with a writ of attachment under a claim of $1,005 held by Kelly, shortly after noon today. The Sheriff's Deputy, who served the writ, attempted to take the tickets for the fight which were in headquarters, but an argument ensued in which Major J. F. Lane, newly-appointed trustee for the fight; Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, and Phil Campbell, ticket manager, participated.

Carl A. Rasmussen, internal revenue collector for Montana, appeared in the ticket office and announced that he had taken charge of the tickets and accounts of the bout in the name of the Government. Rasmussen, with twenty-one officials of the Internal Revenue Department, is here to collect the tax upon the sale of tickets and to watch for scalpers.

Attorney W. E. Arnett of Conrad, Mont., represented Kelly and was with the deputy when the attachment was made. The levy is the second made on Kelly's claims, which in ticket selling work throughout the State Kelly claims he has done.

A few minutes later Kelly said informally that the officials of the fight had agreed to pay him the amount of his claim, in cash and tickets, and that the writ against the promoters would be dismissed.

GIBBONS'S HOME ENTERED.

Thieves Fail to Take Loot, However, When Frightened Away.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 3.—Prowlers who forced an entrance to the home of Tommy Gibbons here early today assembled silverware in one pile, but apparently were frightened away without taking any loot, the police reported.

BOTH CAMPS EXPECT VICTORY IN BATTLE

GIBBONS SURE HE'LL WIN

Challenger Will Have No Alibis If Defeated, but He Is "Not Going to Be Whipped."

The following statements were made by the boxers and their managers on the eve of the championship battle:

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 3.—JACK DEMPSEY—I look for an early ending of the fight. It would be folly to say which round, for I respect the ability of Tom Gibbons, but I shall try my best to end it in a hurry. I have been preparing myself for the kind of boxing expected from Tom and I believe I have fathomed his style.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—JACK KEARNS—The bout with Gibbons will be a mere workout for Dempsey. He needs this bout under his belt to prepare him for several fights I have in mind for him. I look for an early ending of the affair. Gibbons is not in Dempsey's class.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—TOMMY GIBBONS—The bout with Jack Dempsey tomorrow is something I have been angling for for three years. I am in fine shape and will have no alibi if I am whipped but I'm not going to be whipped. That crown will look pretty sweet on my head.

SHELBY, Mont., July 3.—EDDIE KANE—The biggest surprise in pugilistic history is in store for the fight fans tomorrow when Gibbons and Dempsey meet for the championship. Gibbons will be returned the winner. At just what stage of the proceedings I am not prepared to say, but you can bet I will have a real champion tomorrow night.

BETTING LIGHT HERE ON DEMPSEY BATTLE

Commissioners Say Less Than $50,000 Has Been Placed—Odds Are 3 to 1.

Betting on the Dempsey-Gibbons fight, so far as New York is concerned, virtually is nil. The big commissioners of this city, who are accustomed to handling thousands of dollars on important sporting events, are agreed that the bout at Shelby today has been a decided frost. John Doyle said:

"As long as I have been connected with sport, and that is some time, I cannot recall any event in which so little interest was manifested—that is, the kind of interest that stimulates betting. I venture to say that not more than $50,000 has been wagered on the outcome of the bout in the entire city of New York, and most of this money has been placed in small bets, amounts under a thousand dollars.

"I have had but few inquiries as to the odds, and, then, they are inquiries and nothing more. Very few billfolds have been displayed when the fight has been discussed. Usually in advance of an event of this kind discussions are rife, and discussions invariably lead to backing judgment with money, but in this instance there have been few discussions.

"The majority appear to accept a Dempsey victory as a certainty. It is agreed that Gibbons is fast, but he is conceded only an outside chance by most of those who follow boxing. The prevailing belief is that Dempsey is too rugged, too strong and too powerful a puncher for Gibbons. Judging by what I have heard, the majority will be greatly surprised if Gibbons is still fighting after the sixth round.

"The fact that Gibbons is conceded but an outside chance against the champion and the uncertainty regarding the holding of the bout which has shrouded the affair from the start have mitigated betting on the fight. These are the two reasons why this bout will go down in history as one of the poorest betting propositions on record."

The prevailing odds along Broadway are 3 to 1, with Dempsey favored to win. Quotations of 7 and 8 to 5 were heard on Dempsey scoring a knockout. These odds, however, went begging for the most part because of the lack of Gibbons money.

Odds of 2½ and 3 to 1 prevailed in Wall Street, with the same condition reported—no wagering. Those in opposition to know wanted the opinion that not more than $10,000 had been bet in the financial district, and they insisted that this was a liberal estimate.

Receives Moral Support.

Mr. Molumby had little to say at first, but several of his friends who had come up to the second floor corridor to lend him moral support had a good deal to say. Some of them were Legion men and some were Elks; and one of the latter who had elked himself up till he burned with a hard gem-like flame kept shouting: "Make him fight, Loy, we're with you." He didn't say anything about what difference it made that they were with him; the fact seemed to be enough. He accused Kearns of being no sportsman, which, whether true or not, was irrelevant to the matter of high finance under consideration; but he spoke for a considerable group which seemed to think that Mr. Dempsey had been scared out by the prowess of the Northwest home loving hero Tom Gibbons and was taking advantage of this technicality about the last $100,000 in order to sneak away without imperilling his crown.

"Make him fight or leave the State, Loy,"—the implication in this that Fighting Tom Gibbons would be distasteful to Dempsey and that leaving the State would be distasteful for anybody who has seen the way this fight was mismanaged hardly got over with the outlanders, but it went strong with the natives, and there was some regret when Molumby finally accepted Kearns's proposal to fight for the gate, as Kearns ironically put it, for the first $100,000 of the gate.

Molumby accepted and Major Lane said: "Loy, we're with you," and announced that he would put his shoulder to the wheel once more and do all he could to make the fight a success, and nothing was lacking but the presence of a few other ex-dictators to slap Molumby on the back and say, "Go in and win, boy; we're behind you" and just as far behind you as possible."

The preliminary events announced today by matchmaker Mike Collins will include two six-round bouts between aspiring young boxers as yet unnamed, two eight-round duels in which Jack McDonald will box Ernie Sales and Bud Gorman will meet Harry Drake and the ten-round semi-final in which Jimmy Delaney and Jack Burke will play the leading rôles.

There's been so much friendly interest expressed in our plans for a store in the financial district that, though the store is still just a hole in the ground, we take the opportunity of our stores being closed today to tell our friends what we have in mind.

First, let's say that we have no thought of abandoning our long established store at Warren Street and Broadway, which serves the great mercantile district around the City Hall, the dry goods and jobbing districts to the north and the crowds coming from the Brooklyn Bridge and the North River ferries.

But for years we've felt that a store in the real "Wall Street" section would be a great convenience to men whose business is there, who use the Tubes to Brooklyn, Jersey and Uptown, and perhaps never see the City Hall except when they come up to our Warren Street Store. So we've had our eye out for just the right place.

Trouble has been that real estate owners in the financial district seem to expect merchants to do business in holes-in-the-wall, and that's not our style. We must have plenty of room for ample, generous stocks and the sort of service that's expected of us. We had to wait until the Westinghouse Building was started at Liberty Street and Broadway, and we found we could there get ample space for a first-class store.

We'll have at Liberty Street just about the same space as we have at Herald Square, and because our new landlord is reputed to be a hustler we hope to open before the robins nest again—next March, perhaps.

In the meantime, the Warren Street Store is not really far away, and with the 13th Street Store in the mid-town section, Herald Square Store to look out for the Pennsylvania Terminal District and Fifth Avenue and 41st Street Store to see that no one in the Grand Central District goes unserved—our clothing, furnishings, hats and shoes are pretty handy for most men and boys.

DEMPSEY IN BOUT FOR TITLE TODAY

By ELMER DAVIS.

meet other incidental expenses of tomorrow. Jimmy Dougherty of Philadelphia, the referee, has not received his $5,000 fee yet, but that will come along, out of the pockets of the stockholders if not from the gate.

Revenue Agents on Job.

Kearns had nothing to say this afternoon, except that it was time for every one to take hold and smoke it up as much as possible and try to put the thing over. This, indeed, is the fact, and the sighing of the wind over Shelby this afternoon is nothing but the sighs of relief rising from several hundred sporting writers who see this affair at last passing through the financial page and becoming a fighting story.

Twenty internal revenue agents came up from Helena this afternoon to look after the Federal tax on the tickets, one for each cash customer, as one irreverent onlooker said.

Meanwhile Shelby is livening up and crowding up. The crowd was so heavy this afternoon that it was sometimes difficult to walk along the sidewalks on the shady side of Main Street, though there is nobody to speak of on the sunny side. The Chamber of Commerce automobile parking space had 130 cars in it last night, which is 4 per cent. of its capacity.

As a gauge of the decline in traffic from distant points it may be recited that instead of the 200 extra Pullman cars which were expected, only about thirty-five will actually come to Shelby. The only special trains from any distances are two second sections of regular trains from St. Paul and one from Spokane. A special train from Great Falls came in this morning; others are due tomorrow as well as from Billings, Butte, Kalispell and other points in Montana. Much of this is day coach traffic.

Another airplane appeared this afternoon, beating its rivals by flying not more than 50 feet above the house tops. This makes seven of the dangerous creatures known to be at large in the vicinity.

Windows of the Main Street stores display three half-food high models of oil rigs and others are carried in cars down the street for the observation of passers by; but more important than oil to the visitor, if not to the native, is the fact that the water system has been considerably extended by emergency piping and there are drinking fountains of good cool water at frequent intervals. All in all, Shelby is looking up and will come through the fateful Fourth unbowed, though bloody.

One resident of this town, however, has discovered how to get even with fate. He is a young man who wasted his substance in riotous living back in the early days of the fight excitement when grafters and loose livers filled the town. The other night it was all gone and he took counsel with himself about how to get it back. Then he went out among his dissolute companions and told them that it was going to be pretty dry on the Fourth and that if they would raise a purse he would go over the Canadian border and buy enough Scotch to keep the old ship afloat till the fight was over. He friends collected $245 in small bits and he went across the Canadian border. He is still there, address unknown.

When this correspondent reported at half past 12 this morning that the fight was dead it was dead as dead as Kearns. But shortly thereafter somebody shot some adrenalin into it and the wretched creature drew a few long sobbing breaths and came back from the land of shades. In about two hours and a half it was as live as ever, which is not saying much.

Kearns to Rescue.

And, after all, it was not big-hearted Louis Hill, but big-hearted Jack Kearns who saved the fight. His bowels of compassion were unbent by the gallant effort of Montana to go over the top and raise that last hundred thousand, and by the pitiable spectacle of exhaustion presented when the effort was abandoned, he consented to exhibit his artist and try to get his last hundred thousand out of the gate. And that is not such a cold-hearted offer as it seems.

There probably will be a gate, though nobody is safe in predicting anything about this fight. But it will be a heavily qualified gate. In the first place, there will be perhaps 500 or 600 reporters, photographers, telegraph operators, ushers, Deputy Sheriffs and fire chiefs in the arena. All these walk in free. Then there will be free admission for all the ex-managers, ex-promoters, ex-overlords, ex-masterminds, ex-rescuers, ex-refrigerators and ex-undertakers of this fight, and that makes a mob of about 5,000 more.

Of course, they don't get in free in the strict sense, since nearly all of them invested some money in the thing and got advance blocks of tickets for distribution. But as that money is gone and those tickets have been paid for, they are free so far as the cash gate tomorrow is concerned; and nobody seems to know at present how many tickets have been sold in advance or where, or what has become of the money.

Moreover, to a large extent this gate is going to be a Joe Leblang cut rate affair. A lot of Shelby enthusiasts who laid in blocks of fifty-dollar seats in the first flush of last spring have been trying to unload for quite a while. They want to unload at the price they paid, of course, but if they can't get full price they will have to make a quick turnover before the goods spoil on their hands.

At various plateau ringside seats are said to have been offered for $30 with no buyers on a falling market. That was yesterday. Today's bid and asked quotations have not yet come in, but it can be stated that there are

Outpitches Mogridge and Also Hits for Circuit in Eighth—Meusel Makes Great Catch.

Babe Ruth hit his sixteenth home run of the season at the Stadium yesterday and it won a game for the Yankees—their sixth straight. Conversely, the Senators lost, by a score of 2 to 1, in fifteen hard-fought innings.

Still, you can't give the Babe all the credit. He could hardly have got along without the services of Bullet Joseph Bush, who played a double-edged role. Joe hit a homer of his own in the eighth inning, driving in the Yanks' first run, and he outpitched George Mogridge, the lean and cadaverous southpaw, in a terrific pitchers' battle.

Mogridge made only one mistake. He gave Ruth a fast ball through the groove in the last half of the fifteenth, and the Bambino swatted it on a line into the right field seats, just a few feet inside the foul line. It was a rifle shot of a home run, and it broke up the game. As soon as the ball was hit the 5,000 spectators rushed out on the field and Ruth had to elbow his way through a dense crowd before he could touch the plate with the winning run.

For a time it looked as if Bush would win his own game. After seven scoreless innings for the Yanks and eight for the Senators, Joe came to bat in the latter section of the eighth and propelled a rousing smash clear over Goslin's head in left. The ball hit the grass and hopped into the left field bleachers, and the Yanks were a run ahead.

It would have made a pretty story if the homer had won the game. But Steve Evans spoiled it. In the Washington ninth, after Gharrity had singled and was on first base with two out, Steve smote a triple over Ward's head and down the alley in right centre. It was an agonizing moment for the 5,000 loyal fans. So near and yet so far. Two out and a man on first base—and then Evans had to hit a triple.

Evans Caught at Plate.

Gharrity, of course, scored standing up with the tying run, and Evans almost followed him in. He rounded third and broke for home, but Witt threw to Ruth and Ruth made a speedy relay to the plate, and Evans was killed off—although Hofmann brought on cold chills by fumbling just before he was going to plaster the ball on the runner.

The Yanks could do nothing in their half and the game went into extra innings. Harris opened the tenth with a single, but nothing happened. Bush walked for the Yanks and was sacrificed to second. Then Dugan hit to left for a base, but Bush was cautious and stopped at third—a wise move. Ruth was walked intentionally, filling the bases, and Pipp followed with a sharp liner toward right field. It looked like curtains for Washington—until Stanley Harris threw himself in front of the ball, caught it and flung to Gharrity for a double play.

It was a cut-throat game after that—every man for himself and no quarter. In the Washington twelfth Evans singled and Harris sacrificed him along. After Bleuge had filed out Mogridge was passed, but Dugan saved the day by sprinting over in front of Scott, choking Rice's grounder with his glove and throwing to first base.

Now for the thirteenth. Peckinpaugh walked and Goslin singled to left. It looked very dubious. But Bush cleared the air by grabbing Gharrity's bunt and forcing Peck at third. Meusel camped under Reul's fly, and when Evans hit to Bush, Joe tossed to Dugan for the third out.

Ruth and Pipp singled with one gone in the Yankee thirteenth and Meusel was walked intentionally. If Ward had raised a sacrifice fly it would have been all over, but what Aaron actually did was to splash to Mogridge, whose toss to Ruel forced Ruth at the plate. Then George threw three straight balls at Scott, and it looked black, very black. One more ball and Pipp would have walked home. But there wasn't any one ball. Mogridge pitched two strikes, then made Scott swing at a third straight one and lift it in a high fly, which Peck caught out in short left.

Meusel's Catch Saves Game.

The big play of the game was still to come. All the dazzling stops and throws and catches which had gone before were only child's play compared to the brazen piece of robbery which Bob Meusel committed in the fourteenth. When Harris, the first batter in the fourteenth, shot a long fly toward the left field bleachers Robert chased over to the foul line, leaned three or four feet over the edge of the field box and carelessly picked the ball off the heads of a half dozen spectators. It cut off a certain homer and saved the game—that was all, for in their half of the inning the Yanks couldn't move a wheel, although Bush singled with one out—his third hit off Mogridge—and Witt moved him along with a sacrifice. Dugan hit to Peck, who leaped on the ball and made a nice play for an out at first.

For clean, crisp fielding, game-saving plays and fine pitching, the contest was the best of the season at the Ruppert arena. Ruth made a wonderful catch in the eleventh, running far out, nipping Goslin's fly on the run and then tumbling back on the sloping terrace. The Babe alighted on the back of his head and for a while feared the little birdies twittering in the tree tops. He seemed to be completely insensible, lying flat on his back, but after some brisk first-aid work by players the king arose rather shakily and went on with the game.

For that bit of work Stanley Harris got back at the Yanks in the same inning. Meusel started the inning with an apparently sure shingle between first and second, but Harris went over and made a miraculous gloved-hand stop and throw to Gharrity.

Bullet Joseph Bush had somewhat the better of it with Mogridge, who got into more holes, but also got out of them. George was a little shy on control, but so was Bush. In the matter of hits, the Yankee fork-ball pitcher had the better of it—by twelve to eight. Bush allowed only four hits up to the almost fatal moment in the ninth when Evans swatted the triple which nearly won the game.

Incidentally, it was the longest and best played game of the season in the Stadium and the smallest crowd. That's generally the way it goes in baseball.

Detroit used five pitchers. Brower hit the first ball pitched to him by Pillette in the second inning over the right field wall, scoring Stephenson ahead of him.

HOMERS BY MEUSEL WIN FOR GIANTS, 4-2

Two Circuit Clouts Score All of Champions' Runs and Defeat Phillies.

WATSON MAKES HIS DEBUT

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 3.—Two home runs by Irish Meusel, combined with some fine pitching by John Watson, making his first start as a Giant, brought about a victory for the champions over the Phillies here today by a score of 4 to 2. Meusel by twice hitting for the circuit drove in all the Giants' four runs, his first homer being made with two men on the bases and clinching the game. The second homer merely had the effect of swelling the Giants' total, for at the time it was delivered the Phillies already were a beaten team. These clouts gave Meusel a total of seven for the season. Incidentally, it was the second time this year that Irish has made two home runs in a single game. He did it against Grover Cleveland Alexander in Chicago last month.

One of the Phillies' two runs was a homer delivered by Johnny Mokan, the first batter to face Watson. Watson had a count of one strike and one ball on Mokan when the latter cracked the ball into the left field bleachers. Undismayed by such a poor start, Watson stuck to his task and became better as the game proceeded. He had the benefit of splendid support, too, his mates turning off four double plays that helped greatly to check the Phillies' attack.

A minor tragedy of the game was the failure of Cotton Tierney to hit safely in four trips to the plate. Tierney had made one or more hits in twenty-four consecutive games when he ran into Watson today. The Giant pitcher not only prevented him from making a hit but struck him out twice.

Behan Effective at Start.

Pete Behan, who faced the champs at the start of the game, was in a few holes prior to the sixth inning, when Meusel broke up the game. In the first inning the Giants loaded the bases with two out, Frisch doubling to right and Meusel and Young walking, but Behan pitched steadily to Kelly, who hit to Rapp, forcing Meusel at third.

Behan got rid of the Giants as rapidly as they approached the plate in the second and third innings. In the fourth inning Young singled with one out, but Kelly hit into a double play. O'Connell walked in the fifth inning but tried to go from first base to third while Rapp was throwing out Gowdy on a slow roller. The Phils were on their toes, however, and O'Connell was doubled up at third base when Parkinson covered the bag and took a fast throw from Holke.

Behan started the sixth inning smoothly enough by getting rid of Jackson, but he lost his grip in pitching to Groh, who walked. Heinle pulled up sharply at second when Frisch singled to centre, but he and the Flash crossed the plate ahead of Meusel when Irish hammered the ball into the left field bleachers. The bases were empty and one man was out in the eighth inning when Meusel next came to bat. This time he rapped the ball over Williams's head into the centre field bleachers.

Phillies' Rally Checked.

The Phillies tried a rally with two out in their half of this inning but abandoned it after they had scored one run. Williams plastered the ball against the fence in right centre for two bases and Walker brought him in with a single to centre. Walker advanced no further than first base, however, as Tierney was killed off on a long, high fly to O'Connell.

Again, in the ninth, the Phillies tried to start something, this time with one out. Wilson singled to centre and continued to second base when the ball got away from Meusel. Watson, disregarding the base runner, took a wind-up and Wilson stole third. Holke filed to Young, who whipped the ball to the plate with such speed and precision that the startled Wilson dashed back to third base after running a few feet toward the rubber. Here Fletcher called upon Leach to bat for Rapp, but Young came in fast to grab Leach's short fly and the game was over.

Shortstop Secured From New Orleans Gets Purchase Price.

BOSTON, July 3.—Bobby Smith, shortstop of the Boston Nationals, received yesterday checks for $4,000 covering the purchase money which resulted in Smith coming to the Braves from the New Orleans team of the Southern Association.

After the deal was made Commissioner Landis made an investigation which resulted in his finding Smith was a free agent, with the privilege of selling his baseball services to the highest bidder. Accordingly he ordered the money paid to Smith instead of the New Orleans club.

Pirates Score Two Runs in Fifth, Break Tie and Capture Contest, 4 to 2.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 3.—Pittsburgh won again from the St. Louis Cardinals today, 4 to 2, the game being finished on a muddy field after rain caused a delay of twenty minutes in the fourth inning. The Pirates scored two runs in the fifth, breaking the tie and capturing the game.

SYNDICATE MAY BUY RED SOX NEXT WEEK

Frazee Expects No Hitch in Deal for Sale of Club—$1,250,000 Reported Price.

QUINN TO BE NEW HEAD

Announces That He Has Turned Over Affairs of St. Louis Browns to Friel.

Harry Frazee, President of the Boston American League Club, said last night that he had every reason to believe that negotiations for the sale of his interests in the Red Sox to a Columbus, Ohio, syndicate would be consummated next week at Boston.

Mr. Frazee declared he had no definite plans for a final conference with prospective purchasers but admitted the likelihood of a meeting in Boston within a few days with Bob Quinn of St. Louis, who is slated to succeed him as President of the club, and others interested in the deal.

"Details have been pretty well ironed out," Frazee said, "and I anticipate no hitch in closing the sale of my holdings."

The Boston owner was silent on the amount involved in the deal but it was reliably reported that he would receive $1,250,000 for his share of the stock.

Quinn to Become President.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Bob Quinn will become President of the Boston Red Sox if the transfer of the club from Harry Frazee to a Columbus, Ohio, syndicate is consummated, it was announced here this afternoon, Mr. Quinn expressed the belief the transfer would be made.

Mr. Quinn announced that he had turned over the affairs of the St. Louis Browns to Bill Friel, his successor as business manager of the local club, and would depart next week for Boston to talk the matter over with Mr. Frazee.

"I am of the opinion that we shall consummate the deal," Mr. Quinn stated, "but you never can tell what might come up. I shall have a conference with Mr. Frazee in Boston next week at which all angles of the matter will be worked out."

HUNTER ELIMINATES SPANISH CUP STAR

Beats de Gomar in World's Tennis Title Play and Reaches Semi-Finals.

LOSES THE FIRST TWO SETS

American Then Captures Three Straight—The Scores Are 3-6, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-2.

MRS. MALLORY ALSO VICTOR

Pairs With Richards and Advances in Doubles—Miss McKane Triumphs Over Miss Ryan.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Francis I. Hunter won a sensational victory in the Wimbledon lawn tennis tournament today and Miss Ryan suffered an equally sensational defeat. Hunter in the men's singles vanquished Conde de Gomar after the Spanish Davis Cup star had won the first two sets. Miss Ryan, in the semi-finals of the women's singles, had to yield to Miss McKane, although she had captured the first set.

The result is that two Americans are in the semi-finals of the men's singles, William M. Johnson and Hunter, while the women's championship will be fought out between Mlle. Lenglen and Miss McKane. Miss McKane was the favorite when she took the court against Miss Ryan, but she lost the first five games. The American was playing with all her tremendous vigor, but was showing excellent restraint when necessary. She was keeping mainly at the back of the court and her shots went past Miss McKane time and again in absolutely unplayable fashion.

On the other hand, the English woman seemed unhappy with Miss Ryan's heavily chopped drives, and when she did manage to reach them hit them out of the court. So in the first set she succeeded in capturing only the sixth game, which happened to be her service. Miss Ryan consequently took the first set at 6—1. Miss McKane, however, began the second well. She took the first game, and at one time actually led by 4 to 1. For this one game she had to thank Miss Ryan. The former Californian tried to put too fine a chop on her service and actually failed to capture a single point.

Miss Ryan Discouraged.

Moreover, she seemed to find Miss McKane's ability somewhat disconcerting. Miss McKane is noted for her fleetness of foot, and the way she fielded hard drives and then ran up the court in anticipation of Miss Ryan's return discouraged her opponent. The sixth game also went to 40-love in Miss McKane's favor, but then Miss Ryan pulled herself together and won it. Miss McKane, however, refused to give her a real chance to recover. She came boldly up to the net, contrary to her usual practice, and made it 5 to 2 by sheer audacity. Miss Ryan was nervous and helped her opponent win the decisive game by double faults. It was Miss McKane's set, 6 to 2.

As the final set began the excitement was intense and it increased as the games went almost alternately until four-all was reached. Miss McKane was placing her shots magnificently, while Miss Ryan was displaying some wonderful overhead strokes. The players began to feel the strain and noted comparatively easy shots, but Miss McKane took the fifth game and Miss Ryan looked beaten.

The Englishwoman braced herself for one more effort, and with splendidly accurate deep drives took the last game and set, 6 to 4, thereby winning the match.

The result of the great fight between Hunter and de Gomar may be explained briefly. Hunter discovered that he came to the net the Spanish Conte would be fascinated into hitting him an easy ball which he could smash when he pleased. So he kept on doing this and pulled victory from apparently certain defeat although de Gomar took the first two sets with comparative ease. The Spaniard is not a forceful player but is wonderfully supple. He covered the whole court with apparent ease and varied his pace in a fashion that puzzled the American. Hunter would have been much happier with an opponent who smashed everything at him, and during their earlier sets was noticeably timid about coming up to the net.

The first two sets went to de Gomar, 6 to 3 and 6 to 4, and the spectators began to ask how the Spaniard would fare against Johnston in the final. But with the third set Hunter determined to risk everything on his old familiar net game and found that it succeeded marvelously well. He took three games straight, and although de Gomar broke the succession in the fourth he captured the next three. De Gomar seemed to be saving himself for the next set, but as a matter of fact he was utterly at a loss as to how to treat the strenuous American, who seemed able to volley at express speed anything he hit at him.

Hunter Gains Strength.

If he lobbed the bald high Hunter merely killed it. If he tried a passing shot Hunter intercepted it and returned it with an impossible cross-court volley. So the hopes of de Gomar's supporters practically faded away. Hunter gained strength as the play progressed and he won the last three sets at 6—1, 6—3, 6—2. He will meet F. G. Lowe in the semi-finals and if he wins he will play either W. M. Johnston or R. E. C. Norton in the finals.

In the mixed doubles anything may happen and this perhaps accounts for the defeat of Johnston and his partner, Miss Sears, by J. M. Hillyard and Mrs. Satterthwaite. They lost in two straight sets, 7 to 5 and 6 to 4. Mrs. Mallory, on the other hand, got something back from Mrs. Beamish, for with Vincent Richards as her partner, she had not much difficulty in disposing of A. A. Pycroe and W. Rodocanachi, after which she went up against Mrs. Beamish and Miss Fisher and beat them after some tennis of the most lively order, by two sets to one.

A great deal of interest was displayed in the victory of Miss M. L. Colyer and Miss Joan Austin over Mrs. Clayton and Miss Clarke. They are barely out of their teens and are as graceful as trained dancers. They beat their veteran opponents by two sets to one, and perhaps owe their victory to a youthful agility which enabled them to leap for high ones and chase cunningly placed drives.

MANY PLAYERS ELIMINATED.

Municipal Park Tennis Tourney Is Fast Nearing Final Stages.

Many of the 140 players who started in the Manhattan Municipal Park championship tennis tournament last Sunday on the Ninety-third Street courts in Central Park have been eliminated and it is probable that the final stages will be reached the early part of next week in both singles and doubles.

Matches are being played daily, starting shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoons. Players drawn together from day to day are allowed forty-eight hours in which to complete their next round matches.

Spain and Holland to Meet In Davis Cup Play July 9-11

LONDON, July 3.—Spain and Holland will play their semi-final match in the European Zone lawn tennis competition for the Davis Cup at Eastbourne on July 9-10-11, it was announced today. Spain will be represented by Count de Gomar and Eduard Flaquer, while the Dutch team will be selected from Van Lennep, Vanderfeen, H. Trimmer and W. Bryan.

WILLIAMS VICTOR IN NASSAU TENNIS

Former National Champion Easily Captures First-Round Match From Brunie.

Tennis stars of international, national, intercollegiate and metropolitan fame were seen on the courts of the Nassau Country Club, Glen Cove, L. I., in the first round play of the annual invitation tournament, which started yesterday. The first round matches were all completed and three players passed through to the third rounds.

Although the courts were somewhat slow because of the rain, the play was fast, and some of the best tennis seen in local tournaments this season was exhibited. Several defaults made by prominent players cut down the great list that entered, but there still remain in the tournament such performers as Richard Norris Williams 2d, former national single champion and captain of the United States Davis Cup team; William A. Larned, who has captured the national title oftener than any other player; Luke Williams of Yale, intercollegiate champion in 1922; Watson M. Washburn, Davis Cup star and tenth ranking player in the country; Dr. George King, who recently defeated Washburn, for the metropolitan clay court title; Arnold W. Jones, national junior champion, and several others.

W. W. Ingraham, M. Ackerman and Herbert Bowman were the three players who accounted for two victories yesterday. Ingraham defeated Ralph Boggs in the first round match at 6—2, 6—3, being pressed to perform in his best manner, although he was threatened at no time by the loser. Ingraham then advanced at the expense of Ladlow Vandeventer, who had won his first round through the default of Elliott Binsen. Vandeventer carried the first set to 8—7 before he was defeated, but succumbed to Ingraham's study attack rather easily in the second set, which the latter won at 6—1.

Ackerman Gains Easy Victory.

M. Ackerman, who gained the second round by the default of Clarence Pell, went into the third round by eliminating Howard P. Homans, the conquest not exerting the winner to any great extent, as he won in straight sets at 6—2, 6—0. Homans had previously advanced by defeating Leonard Beekman in the first round match. Herbert Bowman was the third player to reach the third round, defeating James Davies, the Leland Stanford University star, at 6—4, 6—3.

All of the titled players came through the early round in splendid fashion, except those who defaulted their matches by their failure to appear. Norris Williams was an easy victor over Harry Brunie and showed that he is well on his way back to the form of last season. His game was not flashy or brilliant, as he was not forced to any great effort, but it was steady at all times.

Phil Neer, intercollegiate champion in 1921, and Luke Williams, who held the same title last year, both came through their matches in the first round, although each was forced to show his best strokes in order to obtain the victory. Neer eliminated Charles Wood only after a bitter struggle that lasted three sets. The former college titleholder was forced to twenty games before he was able to capture the opening set at 11—9, and then dropped the second at 4—6.

Wood weakened enough after the second-set effort to allow the Stanford player to take the deciding frame at 6—3.

Washburn Defeats Vale.

Watson M. Washburn had little trouble in winning from Herbert D. Vale in straight sets and Dean Mathey was little more extended to capture two sets in a row from Victor Chambers, although they went both by the scores of 6—4. Arnold Jones and William A. Larned both advanced by default.

The scores:

First Round—R. Norris Williams 2d defeated Harry Brunie, 6—2, 6—3; John E. Howard defeated Dr. Rosenbaum, 6—2, 6—2; Fred C. Anderson defeated H. C. Tremaine, 6—2, 6—1; S. Howard Voshell defeated Louis Thalheimer, 6—1, 6—0; Lewis White defeated Manfred Goldman, 6—3, 6—1; Ludlow Vandeventer won from Elliott H. Binsen by default; William W. Ingraham defeated Ralph Boggs, 6—2, 6—3; F. R. Ferguson won from Masamosuke Fukuda by default; Philip Neer defeated Charles Wood, 11—9, 4—6, 6—3; M. Ackerman won from Clarence Pell by default; Dr. George King defeated Artie Harrington, 6—4, 6—3; William A. Larned won from Charles Shipway by default; Joseph Stratford won from William N. Fischer by default; Lucien E. Williams defeated Robert J. Roy, 6—4, 6—2; Watson M. Washburn defeated Herbert D. Vale, 6—2, 6—0; Edward Kabinadel defeated Walker O. Tate, 6—2, 6—0; Cedric R. Major won from Richard Emmett by default; Arnold W. Jones won from James D. Ewen Jr. by default; Dean Mathey defeated Victor Chambers, 6—4, 6—4; Jerome A. Lang defeated Fred C. Bogert, 6—3, 6—4; James Davies won from Coleman Jennings by default; Herbert L. Bowman won from Theodore Roosevelt Pell by default; H. G. Kelleher defeated William J. # OUR BOOTS FIRST IN STIRRING 'CHASE

HEPHAISTOS FINISHES FAST

Gets Up to Beat Shuffle Along by a Nose in Old Rosebud Handicap—Shaffer Destroyed.

Lovers of steeplechasing who attended the racing at the Aqueduct track yesterday afternoon were rewarded by a sterling contest through the field in the Glendale Steeplechase Handicap of two miles and a half, with $3,500 added, which was the featured event of the day's card. The race, which was full of action from start to finish, was won by the Greentree Stable's five-year-old chestnut gelding Our Boots, which led the field of six from the fall of the flag to the finishing post, although he was hard pressed all through the long journey. The race was run in 5:04, excellent time in view of the hard rain of the early morning. Mrs. Payne Whitney profited by the sum of $4,115, which was the winner's share of the purse.

All of the entries went to the post and, better still, every one of them finished. Our Boots had the benefit of a fine ride by E. Haynes, who sent the son of Picton and Valitari out into the lead. Haynes did not attempt to make a runaway of it, but kept his field hustling to keep up with him, and he saved all the ground possible. Our Boots fenced well, but tired at the end from the fast pace he had set and lasted just long enough to beat J. S. Cosden's Bullseye by half a length.

There might have been a different story to tell if Jockey Shelepets, who had the mount on Bullseye, had not lost a stirrup iron coming to the last fence. The horse made a poor landing, and this incident probably cost him the race, Bullseye was eight lengths in front of Fastadale, the little English chaser now running under the Cosden colors, and the latter was ten lengths ahead of Soumangha, the Greentree Stable's second string, on which Vincent Powers, who trains the stable's jumpers, had the mount.

Hephaistos Is Victor.

Hephaistos, F. . Browne's four-year-old bay colt, was the winner of the Old Rosebud Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth, beating J. E. Widener's Shuffle Along by a neck, the latter being seven lengths in front of Playfellow of the Quincy Stable. Hephaistos can run three times a week, and on the sloppy track of yesterday he proved at home. The son of Vulcain and Nova W. never really does his best until he feels the lash and he felt it in the final drive after Shuffle Along had led all the way. Playfellow was outclassed. Hephaistos splashed through the stop in the fast time of 1:46, only three seconds slower than the record for the track. The winner was the favorite at 6 to 5, Shuffle Along being at 7 to 5.

The rain of the early morning made the track very sloppy all afternoon, and the weather was threatening, although no rain fell during the racing. In spite of the unfavorable conditions a good-sized crowd turned out and enjoyed some excellent sport. Favorites fared poorly, only two rewarding their backers during the afternoon.

Long shots carried off the money in the seven-furlong dash for three-year-olds and upward, the winner being Mrs. T. D. Donohue's three-year-old filly Listen Dearie, at 8 to 1 in the wagering. The daughter of Trojan and Ansonella finished seven lengths in front of C. Cafarelli's Recommendation, a 10-to-1 shot, the latter being three lengths in front of Mrs. Mrs. Davis's Zealot, which was quoted at 12 to 1.

Shaffer Is Destroyed.

John Shaughnessy's Shaffer, the favorite at 5 to 2, broke down hopelessly in both forelegs a sixteenth from home, and had to be destroyed. Twelve ran, the time for the race being 1:26 2-5. The winner was in light at 102 pounds, received weight from everything else, liked the going and just galloped home. The summaries:

Webster Captures Eastern Small-Bore Rifle Honors

SEAGIRT, N. J., July 3.—W. O. Webster of Wilmington, Del., won the Eastern small-bore rifle championship match shot here today, at 50, 100 and 200 yards, by making 247 bullseyes out of a possible 250. L. J. Miller of Brooklyn, who made the same number of bullseyes, but was slightly outranked, was second. In the Eastern two-man team match, shot at 100 and 200 yards, L. U. Corsa of Mahwah, N. J., and Charles H. Johnson of Upper Darby, Pa., made 570 bullseyes out of a possible 600. Corsa was also awarded a special prize for making the highest individual score in the match, 293 bullseyes out of a possible 300.

HORSEMEN TO RAISE FUND FOR JUMPERS

International Steeplechase Subscription Started to Buy Horses Abroad.

Invitations have been sent out to horsemen to take part in the International Steeplechase Subscription, a movement arranged for the purpose of increasing interest in steeplechasing. The subscription has been arranged by a committee consisting of Mrs. Payne Whitney, Joseph E. Davis, Paul D. Cravath, Joseph E. Widener and Richard H. Williams. Interest already in evidence guarantees the success of the plan, but there is no intention of restricting it to those to whom invitations have been sent. Any one interested in steeplechasing is welcome to participate.

The terms of the subscription call for a closing on Tuesday, Aug. 14, with the cost of each subscription $3,000, which must accompany the acceptance. The horses will be purchased in England, Ireland and France. Stallions, mares and geldings will be bought, the horses to be not younger than three-year-olds in 1923, nor older than six years. It is planned to have them as nearly as possible of uniform ability and they must have shown sufficient form to warrant the hope that they will show winning form in this country. When the horses arrive they will be distributed by lot among the subscribers.

The movement has been initiated in an endeavor to make new friends for the sport through the field and also to bring into active competition a generous quota of made jumpers which will materially improve steeplechasing in all parts of the country.

The several racing associations which include jumping races in their programs are in sympathy with the idea and will tender liberal purses restricted to the subscription horses and will increase the number of events to which these horses will be eligible. It is hoped to secure between forty and fifty horses, all of which have shown quality as well as ability over the jumps.

BILTCHIK ADVANCES IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Reaches Semi-Finals of Kings County Play by Beating Nannes and Minster.

The semi-finals of the Brooklyn-Kings County tennis tournament were reached at the nets of the Ridge Club courts, Bay Ridge, yesterday, with Percy L. Kynaston, P. A. Bodkin, Isadore Biltchik and R. K. Larson surviving their fourth-round matches. Of the sixty-four players entered in the start of the play, eight were seeded, but Larson, one of the players not seeded in the draw, has come through the earlier matches in splendid fashion, while five of the seeded performers have fallen by the wayside. He will encounter Isadore Biltchik this morning in the semi-final round, while Kynaston and Bodkin meet in the other half of the round. The final will be played for the championship this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Biltchik was the only player to account for a double victory in the play yesterday. He defeated C. H. Nannes in the third-round match at 6—0, 6—2, and had very little trouble in the accomplishment. In the fourth round Jerome Minster, another one of the seeded players, pressed him all the way, but Biltchik succeeded in winning in straight sets by a strong overhead attack which could not be suppressed by his opponent in the crises, and the match went at 6—3, 6—3.

Kynaston's advance came at the expense of F. D. Danielson, who surprised the experts by defeating Larry Blessinger in the first-round match. Kynaston met a fairly strong opposition in the first set, which he won at 6—3, but found himself in the second and romped through to a love victory by his strong stroking from the back court. Kynaston, who is the defending titleholder, was at his best during the last few games of the second set, when he completely smothered everything that his opponent was able to return across the net.

P. A. Bodkin gained the semi-finals bracket by eliminating another player seeded in the draw E. H. Kuhn. The winner was forced in both sets, which he captured at 6—3, 6—3, to extend himself to the limit, and the play was quite the fastest of the day. Larson's victory over Noyes was the longest match of the day, and was the only one to be extended to three sets. The scores were 6—2, 4—6, 6—4. In the last set Noyes ran into a stanchion and was thrown heavily to the ground. In jumping over the net to go to the assistance of his opponent, Larson also fell and was severely jolted. Both had to rest for several minutes before they could resume play. The scores:

Fourth Round—Percy L. Kynaston defeated F. D. Danielson, 6—3, 6—0; P. A. Bodkin defeated E. H. Kuhn, 6—1, 6—4; Isadore Biltchik defeated Jerome Minster, 6—3, 6—3; R. K. Larson defeated S. G. Noyes, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4.

ZILPH IS WINNER IN SOUND REGATTA

MISTRAL FINISHES SECOND

Oriole Victor in New York Y. C. 30-Foot Class—Good Sailing Breeze Greets Skippers.

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, N. Y., July 3.—A good sailing breeze from the southeast greeted the forty-nine yachts which started in the annual regatta of the American Yacht Club, sailed on the Sound today. James R. Hayes's Zilph sailed home first in the New York Yacht Club 40-foot class, completing the 16¾-mile course in an elapsed time of a little more than three hours. Five minutes astern was P. R. Mallory's Mistral, five seconds separating her from C. B. Deeley's Shawara. Typhoon, owned by W. J. Ehrich, was disqualified because an amateur helmsman did not sail her across the starting line.

S. C. Firle's Oriole captured first place in the event of New York Yacht Club 30-footers, with Ogden Reid's Lena close behind. There was some confusion among the yachtsmen in several classes as to the proper course to sail, despite the fact that the red flag, the signal for reversal of course, was displayed from the committee boat Porpoise. The courses were reversed in order to provide a windward leg. This boat came on the first line of the triangle, which had its apex off Scotch Caps.

Georgia, owned by H. M. Cowperthwait, crossed the finish line first in the race for Larchmont O boats, with D. F. Alker's Numbus second, the Gray Dawn third and the Maisie fourth. W. D. Hamilton's Hamilta won the race for the first division handicap class on both actual and corrected times. Blue Jacket, belonging to J. B. Ford, took the Victory Class event.

Mais II. sailed by E. L. Linkfield, was thirteen seconds behind G. A. Corry's Little Dipper in the Star Class race. These two crafts had a big lead over the remainder of the class.

The Race Committee aboard the Porpoise, the property of Ogden Reid, was made up of Chairman R. de Parsons, William Remsen, John B. Shethar, Frederic W. Sherman and W. J. Curtis, Jr.

THE FOURTH LESS SANE AND SAFE.

EMERSON, writing a poem to be read at a Fourth of July celebration in Concord, began with the inspiring lines:

> Oh! tenderly the haughty Day
> Fills his blue urn with fire.

Young America long filled the day, and most of two nights, with fire and detonations. "Going out of town to avoid the Fourth," wrote JULIA WARD HOWE many years ago, "has been a phrase so common in my time that it ceases to awaken attention, and is taken as a matter of course." She proposed, in place of the nerve-shattering racket, a celebration with martial music and military displays, commemorative orations, school exercises, and, in the evening, singing of the national anthem, tableaux vivants and fireworks. Just before the World War ROBERT HAVEN SCHAUFFLER appealed to his countrymen "to enter the splendid new movement which is endeavoring to make the Fourth over from a day of shallow jingoism and unmeaning brutality and carnage into a day of initiation into the meaning of true citizenship and a festival of deep and genuine and beautiful patriotism." JOHN ADAMS has sometimes been charged with responsibility for the "old-fashioned Fourth," but unjustly. What he did say about Independence Day in a letter to his wife was this:

> It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

Not a word about giant firecrackers, torpedoes or toy pistols! The guns JOHN ADAMS had in mind were pieces of artillery to be fired by Revolutionary veterans from the village common, a military post or arsenal, as dawn was breaking, to open the celebration in the spirit of the struggle for freedom. As time went on, the Glorious Fourth was more and more a day by which the makers of explosives profited and the youth of the land suffered mutilation. During five celebrations from 1903 to 1907, inclusive (the figures were compiled by The Journal of the American Medical Association), 1,153 persons were killed in the United States and 21,520 were injured. Eighty-eight of the latter were totally and 389 partially blinded, 808 lost arms, legs or hands, and 1,087 one or more fingers.

To stop this carnage and to turn the thoughts of misguided patriots, adult and juvenile, toward a rational observance of Independence Day, the movement for a sane and safe Fourth was launched. In cities, if not in the rural districts, it gained headway rapidly. Public officials and the newspapers co-operated. Ordinances were adopted to forbid the sale of explosives, and the discharge of them was penalized. After the first sane and safe Fourth in New York the Mother Superior of a local hospital gratefully said: "It seemed as if we were in paradise." For several years nobody had to go out of town to "avoid the Fourth." But here in New York and the suburbs we have been slipping back again. The ordinances are still on the statute books, but violations are winked at. This year we are threatened with a return to the "old-fashioned Fourth." There has been a large sale of firecrackers and bombs in New Jersey and Westchester, and they have been smuggled into the Greater City. In the New Jersey towns, some of which have no ordinances, the celebration began two weeks ago, and it will reach its crescendo between dawn and midnight today. The sane and safe Fourth will be thrown on the scrapheap if its friends do not rally to restore and preserve it.

CONSERVATION BY DEVELOPMENT.

The President's speech in Spokane on the general problem of conservation of natural resources is open to misinterpretation. Addressed to an audience partial to exploitation, its somewhat ambiguous terms may have given the impression that he has a new theory according to which the best way of conserving is to consume. His observation in this and foreign countries, Mr. HARDING said, has convinced him that "wise development of natural resources does not often result in their disastrous diminution," but rather, "it seems, as a rule, to result in a growing, an expanding, an increasing supply and variety of the very riches upon which we make drafts." In confirmation of this he pointed to other countries, including China, without apparently pausing to consider the disastrous effect in China of a policy of using up forests. Our own days of destructive exploitation, the President thinks, are fortunately over—but he fails to show that the chief reason for this is not a change of heart, but widespread exhaustion of the resources which were so ruthlessly consumed. Mr. HARDING opposes grants to great corporations, but favors Government help in the development of our resources.

There is the rub. A full reading of the President's speech shows that he believes in conservation, but that he does not believe that this is best achieved by simply locking up undeveloped resources. Yet the use of the word "development" creates confusion. Development of water power is clearly a prevention of waste, and may be classed as true conservation. Also, to use water for extending irrigated districts without seriously curtailing its use for other purposes is a form of conservation which is at the same time effective development. But, when it comes to forests, "development" is only too often synonymous with destruction.

With the development of water power the entire country is in sympathy. It can be had without curtailing the supply of water for irrigation purposes, and without seriously marring the beauties of the landscape. Inasmuch as many important water sites touch upon Government reserves of one sort or another, most of which are preserved for their natural beauty, the fact that power can be developed without inflicting unsightly scars is of no little importance. As means of transporting and storing electric current are improved, the value and urgency of hydroelectric development will increase.

With the opening of new irrigated regions the people of the West are in accord. But the suggestion of "development" as applied to forest lands, even if done by "decades and centuries," as Mr. HARDING proposes, will not be warmly received in the rest of the country until the President clarifies his thought about such development increasing, rather than decreasing, the nation's wealth. There is little doubt that enemies of conservation will take his words to mean greater leniency in carrying out the policy of conservation. Only a close examination of the speech as a whole contradicts this impression. Yet the ambiguity clearly calls for an explanation in more specific terms of the President's exact attitude toward conservation.

MIRACLES ARE RARE.

Senator SMOOT probably knows more about the finances and the whole business of the Government than any other man in Congress. In now opposing a reduction of taxes by the next Congress he stands on solid ground, no matter how unpalatable his opinion may be. The Treasury surplus for the fiscal year that ended June 30 was an unexpected piece of good fortune. A year ago a deficit of $823,000,000 was predicted. Money poured in and gave the prophets a happy disappointment. Customs receipts increased by some $200,000,000, internal revenue receipts by some $420,000,000, miscellaneous receipts by about $130,000,000. Revived business swelled the income and profits tax collections; and the ordinary operating expenses were nearly $300,000,000 less than for the previous fiscal year.

At once the Bonus Brigade began to cry for a bonus and to discredit the Budget Bureau's estimate of a deficit for the fiscal year 1924. Mr. SMOOT thinks that a Bonus bill will be driven through over Mr. HARDING's veto; also that probably a Public Building bill will be passed, so that the reduction of expenditures, which was one means of producing a surplus, is to be given up as soon as the surplus is in sight; and the accidental and temporary enlargement of receipts is to be assumed as permanent. A miraculous surplus can always be depended upon! Aside from the prospect of spendthrift policies, Mr. SMOOT has an essential reason for opposing lower taxation in the immediate future: "The war debt has not been reduced sufficiently to justify any radical, or, in fact, an appreciable, reduction in the present revenue laws."

That may be unsavory, but it is wholesome. Everybody complains of taxation, Federal, State and municipal; but in regard to the first, at least, what can be done except to cut down expenses? This is the last thing that politicians will think of doing for any length of time. Mr. SMOOT says that there will be "a big drive by the practical politicians for modification of the revenue laws" in the next Congress; but will it get anywhere? The progressives and radicals want sky-scraping excess profits taxes. They want to put the screws on great incomes. A lot of Democrats are just as extreme; but it seems unlikely that any measures of that sort can pass the Senate. Then, with an eye to votes, Congress looks tenderly on the most numerous class of income-tax payers; and would love to coddle them with exemptions. Then, everything for the farmers, nothing for any other business.

Whatever happens, it is certain that the magicians in Washington can't lower taxes and put up expenses, which is what they want to do. It will take all their wizardry to provide the money for a bonus.

THE VATICAN'S SECOND VOICE.

Even the Vatican, it seems, when making a pronouncement upon a question not of faith and morals, can be misunderstood. Its note of last week respecting the situation in the Ruhr was taken ill in France and with jubilation in Germany—both under a misapprehension. The Germans, with their unfailing credulity, saw in it a severe rebuke for the French Government, and further ground for their long-deferred hope of a wedge driven between the Allies. As for the French, after their recent renewal of diplomatic relations with the Holy See, they naturally felt disturbed and somewhat piqued over the intimation that the Pope did not approve of the policy which they were pursuing in attempting to force Germany to a settlement.

Serious representations were made at the Vatican by the French Government, with the result that the whole matter has been cleared up. In explicit terms the latest Papal utterance disavows all sympathy with the passive resistance of the Germans in the Ruhr, and especially reprobates the acts of sabotage, some of which have led to assassination, steadily committed by the Germans. Thus fades another German illusion. The single one remaining is that England will break with France, in a way to destroy the Entente and to permit Germany to evade her obligations under the Treaty of Versailles. When that illusion also is shattered, as all the trustworthy evidence is that it soon will be, Germany may be expected to apply to Paris in order to find out the best terms of surrender that she can obtain.

ELIMINATING WASTE EFFORT.

A recent article in the Bulletin of the National City Bank calls attention to a provision which has for years been incorporated in the Military Appropriations bill with the object of preventing the application of scientific management in Government shops. No part of the appropriations, so reads this clause, may be paid to any one "while making or causing to be made with a stop watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any employé between the starting and completion thereof or of the movements of any such employé while engaged upon such work." This prohibition was introduced through pressure of labor organizations when, about ten years ago, time-saving experiments had been tried in some of the Government shops.

The Bulletin contrasts this refusal to permit the study of labor-saving methods with the development of the principles of scientific management as outlined by the late FREDERICK C. TAYLOR. It quotes at length the description of the time studies and labor-saving experiments in the Ford factories in Detroit to show how such studies not only made possible a great reduction in the cost of production, but also a great increase in the rate of pay to employés. A careful analysis of the work of assembling a "flivver" showed that much time and effort were wasted by the old practice of having the men bring parts to the spot where the car was being put together. It was therefore decided to bring the work to the men, instead, and this was done by carrying out the operation of assembling on a moving trolley line, which was gradually developed until the rate of speed was so regulated and the work so distributed as to allow each man, as the line passed him, to perform his particular operation. The same principle was applied to other parts of the operation, with enormous savings in effort and expenditure.

That such "efficiency" measures, when carried to extremes, are hard on many of the employés, is, of course, true. This is the principal objection which labor leaders have made to all devices to "speed up" work. But because when abused the system imposes hardships is hardly a sound argument against intensive scientific study of all manner of work with the view to eliminating unnecessary motion and to saving needless effort. The strong opposition to the introduction of time-saving devices is akin to the old outcry against labor-saving devices, and against nearly all revolutionary machinery. Anything that greatly increases production is likely to displace work done under the old system. The introduction of mills put an end to much of the hand weaving; the development of large factories forced many small shops to close.

Only the constant study and improvement of machinery, however, has made possible the enormously increased production of all kinds of goods. Had these studies been successfully halted, either through legislation or through class terrorization, much of the development of the modern world would have been impossible. It stands to reason that anything that helps one man do the work of two is of value to the entire community. The old argument that it robs the second man of his means of livelihood has been amply disproved by the history of industrial development.

A DAY FOR THE NEWCOMERS.

The Fourth of July is a good day to think of naturalized Americans, particularly as this year it coincides with a great influx of immigrants. Columns have been filled with articles on the problems of assimilation. From many public platforms this subject has been discussed. THEODORE ROOSEVELT once proposed that a copy of the Constitution of the United States and a copy of the Declaration of Independence be presented to each immigrant on reaching Quarantine. He further advocated the formation of a committee of five thousand men and women distributed all over the land. They were to keep in touch with the new arrivals. They were also to visit places where immigrants work, shops, factories, farms, to convince them that Americans are interested in their welfare.

The Lecture Bureau of the Board of Education has not been inactive. Every Saturday evening at the Labor Temple in Fourteenth Street a lecture on naturalization is delivered, followed by a study of the Constitution article by article. After this, through the courtesy of the United States Department of Labor, naturalization blanks are handed to applicants, to whom the lecturer explains the questions and shows how to fill them in. The success of the course has been so pronounced that the Lecture Bureau has decided to open a new centre next Winter in the uptown part of the city.

To make the acquiring of citizenship more impressive there should be a change in the system adopted in our courts. The would-be citizen is not made to realize the value of the certificate handed to him by the clerk of the court. It has been suggested that, once or twice a month, a day be devoted to the granting of naturalization papers. Representative Americans would address the applicants and their witnesses. Flags should decorate the room. Patriotic songs should be sung. The idea generally uppermost in the mind of the new citizen is that he has gained the privilege of voting; but he does not feel, at the time he receives his certificate of naturalization, that he has public duties. An outline of what such duties are, given from the Judge's bench, would do a geat deal toward inspiring the new citizen with his responsibility to his adopted country.

THE HALIBUT TREATY.

In the Canadian House of Commons the Conservatives failed decidedly in their attack on the treaty between Canada and the United States to protect the halibut fisheries of the Pacific Coast. Was the Government guilty of "unnecessary and indecorous" conduct in not allowing the British Ambassador at Washington to sign the treaty? The Government had the better of the argument. It had no trouble in showing by quotations from Sir ROBERT BORDEN, from ARTHUR MEIGHEN, leader of the Opposition, and other Conservative authorities that Canada and the other self-governing dominions were free nations within the British Commonwealth. Indeed, since Canada signed the Versailles Treaty and became a member of the League of Nations, it might be expected that the United States Government would accept a treaty signed by a Canadian Minister, acting for the King, thereby recognizing by implication that Canada is a nation.

Still, Mr. MEIGHEN made one fair point against the treaty. The Government said it affected no imperial interest. How about the reservation made by the United States Senate—which accepts mighty little and nothing without reservations? "None of the nationals and inhabitants and vessels and boats of any other part of Great Britain shall engage in halibut fishing contrary to any provisions of the treaty."

The Canadian House of Commons has accepted the treaty, or convention, as the Canadian Government suggested that it be called. It hasn't accepted the reservation. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Mr. LAPOINTE, and Premier KING said that they had "reasonable ground for believing that the United States Senate would repeal the reservation." What has reason to do with Senate reservations? Mr. LAPOINTE said that the Senate's reservation was unnecessary, because the regulations under the treaty or convention would prevent any vessel of any nation whatsoever from using a Canadian or United States Pacific port as a base for halibut fishing. Without such a base it would be impossible for a vessel to engage in "halibut fishing." The treaty provides for a close season of three months, beginning in November. Congress will meet in December. Will the close season be over before the Senate considers again this unnecessary reservation"? The Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries should be more careful in his language. Water isn't half as necessary to a halibut as a reservation to our best Senatorial minds.

THE OREGONIAD.

In preparing such a series of speeches as the President has been delivering, he is entitled, in all fairness, to literary assistance. The writer who aided him in the address on the history of Oregon which he delivered in that State yesterday has a pen from which rhetoric and sentiment easily drip. The dashing of his style, where rolls the Oregon, is fascinating. But why should he have revamped for Mr. HARDING's use the dramatic but mythical story of MARCUS WHITMAN intervening with President TYLER and Secretary of State DANIEL WEBSTER in order to "save Oregon" for the United States?

That was long a cherished American legend, but ever since it was demolished by E. G. BOURNE, more than twenty years ago, even the ordinary books of reference declare it to be unfounded. It was not the missionary WHITMAN who saved Oregon, but the stream of American settlers and pioneers, whose praises President HARDING uttered yesterday. Perhaps his literary adviser thought that the Whitman myth still flourished in Oregon, so that it would do no harm to repeat and embellish it. But there are now universities and libraries in that State, and it is probable that many of Mr. HARDING's hearers smiled respectfully as they listened to the old tale, pious but now discredited.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Unprepared to Meet a New Danger.

Day after day the total number of fatalities and mutilations caused by automobiles piles higher and higher, and while systematised exhortations to children and others to be on their guard against highway perils seem to have a little effect, no real change seems to be accomplished. People either will not, or cannot, exercise the not very great amount of care by which practically all of these so-called accidents could be prevented.

Probably the fact is that they simply cannot—that, having been taught by centuries of experience to be on their guard against vehicles for the most part lighter and moving less rapidly than motor cars, human beings are unable for the present to adjust themselves to essentially new conditions.

This is as true—if it is true—of those who drive the cars as of those on foot who do not get and keep out of their way. In the first class there now are many persons who are incapable of the quick muscular responses to nerve stimuli that are essential for meeting the instant emergencies, large and small, which the automobilist constantly encounters. There are tests by which such persons could be discovered among the applicants for licenses, but no such tests anywhere are applied, and the result is that perhaps the most dangerous drivers on the roads and streets are men and women of the best intentions—who sincerely think themselves careful and considerate. These are they who, after a longer or shorter list of minor mishaps, at last kill themselves or others.

Possession of an automobile, and especially the driving of one, gives to not a few people a sense of superiority which they never had before, and this produces a sort of psychic intoxication, the consequences of which can be seen in the irritability with which they hoot pedestrians out of what they quite mistakingly regard as their road. Such folk, too, should be eliminated from the company of chauffeurs, and they could be if the aid of modern psychologists were invoked.

He Probably Didn't Believe It.

It is to be hoped that President HARDING did not take too seriously the statement of the engineer whose electric locomotive he drove for some miles, this week, out in the State of Washington, that the problem of perpetual motion has been solved in the running of that railway. For nothing less than that solution would be required to make true the assertion that "the power generated by the engine while taking the down grade was shot back to a transforming station, which in turn gave it back to the engine of an ascending train" and "this transformed power is sufficient to haul the other train up the steep grade."

It certainly doesn't do anything of the kind if "the other train" is of a weight as great, or anything like as great, as the one that "shoots back" the power. It is a fact, however, that on the road that carried the President there is utilization of the energy that otherwise would have been wasted in wearing out brake shoes on down grades. This energy really is transformed into electricity which does help in hauling other trains up the hills. The help is real, what there is of it, but it is far from making unnecessary the maintenance of power stations that supply the energy required for doing the greater part of the road's pulling.

The trouble with the tale told to the President is that it ignored losses of energy from the assorted frictions incidental to the use of machinery of any sort. Loaded trains going down hill can or might pull unloaded trains going up, but that is the most that can be or is effected in this way.

At Least It Eased His Mind.

Whether or not Commissioner EBBERT was wise in sending to Mayor HYLAN the letter made public yesterday, in which his critics in particular, and almost everybody else in general, was so savagely denounced—that is a question to which at least two answers could be given, with the majority of the judicious making a negative one.

Certainly, the communication will not have the effect of turning into friends any of the Commissioner's enemies, nor will it influence court or legislative proceedings one way or another. Still, it must have given him a certain easily understandable satisfaction to let the public know just how he feels about his grievances, and there is no doubt that the letter made what is called "good reading." It showed the possession by its writer of a considerable vocabulary and the power to use all the words in it with vigor, lucidity and correctness.

Probably, when the Commissioner cools off—and the full and free expression of his emotions will hasten that process—he will regret some of the harsh things the letter contained, for he must know that the great majority of New Yorkers are kindly disposed toward him and place no small estimate on his abilities.

He has created the animosities unavoidable by a man in his position, but not many of his fellow-townsmen take him for anything like so black as he has been painted by a few of them. He has no real cause for complaint against the metropolitan press. It never has failed to utilise such opportunities as he has given it to praise his achievements—they have been numerous—and he is old enough and has been a politician of sorts long enough not to take too much to heart accusations which are made against him, as it were, in the course of nature.

Her Visitors Are Too Numerous.

One of THE TIMES's correspondents gave not too gentle hint yesterday that she, as a resident of the country, is "fed up," as the English say, with the frequency and length of the visits paid to her by her city friends. This burden, she wrote, had been increased beyond endurance since the automobile made her home more accessible to more people than it used to be in the days before everybody had a means of swift transportation over long distances, and she irritably wondered why her acquaintances did not remember that she herself liked to go away occasionally in the Summer.

Probably the grievance of the writer is a real one, but she can avenge it, as not a few country folk do, by making Winter visits equally numerous and long in the city.

The balance of imposition among those who think their hospitality too hard worked must be fairly level, and, after all, he who has unwanted visitors has them only because he lacks the courage to make his feelings known in any one of a hundred ways in which welcomes can be cooled to the freezing point. He is as little deserving of sympathy as is one who growls about the number and cost of the presents he is obliged to make at Christmas.

THREE MILES ENOUGH.

America Can Enforce Prohibition Without Asking for Help.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Throughout recent discussion of the proposal to extend our three-mile limit of search and seizure to twelve and to ask the various maritime nations, especially Great Britain, to agree to such extension, there is one phase of the subject of discussion to which I have seen no allusion.

Is it not rather an unusual thing for a powerful nation to ask for the co-operation of other nations to enable it to enforce its own laws? Surely, if it chooses to use them, the American Eagle has beak and claws strong enough to keep anything it chooses to exclude from passing through the belt of water off our coast, even though it be but three miles wide. If we should build or buy a few hundred high-powered boats, should equip each with a searchlight, a machine gun and a sufficient crew and should put them in commission patrolling the three-mile belt, night and day, the chance of any smuggler's craft getting through would be so small as to be negligible.

When, instead of doing this, we simply appeal to other nations to extend our jurisdiction further into the high seas than it has extended for generations, does it not look as if we were trying to save ourselves trouble and expense, were trying to "let George do it," at least in part?

Surely we are big enough and strong enough to clean up our own door-step and it seems hardly seemly, under such circumstances, to ask the rest of the world to turn to and help us.

Better to Learn a Trade.

It seems to me there are too many people who try to make a living with their brains. Education has a tendency to make people despise any kind of work where a white collar cannot be worn. I would advise any young man who thinks of a career in the white-collar class to forget about it and learn a trade. He is more likely to find the road to prosperity and happiness that way than by any other.

"SAILING TODAY."

Baggage and passports and flowers and friends,
The blue of the harbor, sea smell and salt spray,
The voices of women, the chatter of children,
The laugh of the bride who is sailing today—
Blue hats and red hats and fluttering ribbons,
Bobbed hair and high hair and permanent curls,
The crush on the decks like a scene in a movie,
Bald-headed plutocrats, henna-haired girls.
Both dreading the signal when lovers must leave!
On the deck by the rail is a little old lady,
So slim and so frail, like some little brown wren;
Her son holds her hand and their faces are wistful—
She is delicate, old—will he see her again?
That sound—that uncanny and hideous clamor—
Groups revolve and dissolve, there's confusion confounded.
"Write from Paris, Cecile," and "Please cable us, Dad—"
The gangplank drops down and the ship seems to tremble,
Then, stately and slow, like a ship in a play,
She moves—they are waving and laughing and crying—
Their faces grow tiny—she's out in the bay!
The dock and the harbor, the strange jagged skyline,
The glimmer of whitecaps, a shape blurred and dun;
Then emptiness, stillness, gray sky and gray water—
But the little gray mother still waves to her son.

FUNDAMENTALIST DEMANDS.

Insist on Knowing What Doctrine Missionaries Are Teaching to the Heathen.

As one who was present at the meeting referred to in your issue of last Friday when the Board of Managers of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society refused access to its files to Dr. John E. Straton and the Baptist Fundamentalist League, may I have a few words in your paper?

The board refused to let us see certain letters which we were prepared to name as containing evidence that false doctrine was being taught on the foreign field, because it held that the correspondence of the missionaries was confidential, and, therefore, we had no right to it. Let me say in justice to the Fundamentalists that, of course, we regard the personal and family affairs of missionaries as confidential, and we have no desire whatever to pry into them. But we do not agree with the board that the doctrines they preach in their churches, the lectures they give in their schools, and the work they do in converting the heathen to Christianity are confidential and should, therefore, be kept from the knowledge of the denomination. These are matters that are in the open and cannot, and should not, be kept secret, even if it is desired to do so; they are matters in which all the people of the denomination are interested, and for which they are paying their money. They are matters for which the denomination is responsible, because it educates the missionaries, sends them out, and pays them to teach the doctrines of Christianity, and if, instead of doing this, they are teaching the doctrines of Fosdick, Grant and other radicals, the denomination has a right to know it and to recall them. Knowledge that is of concern to all the people of the denomination should not be held confidential by a few. The Board of Managers of our Mission Society has no right to say that what concerns the kingdom of God is confidential and can only be known to a small group.

The Fundamentalists are confident that all right thinking people take this view, and they believe that very soon our board will have to admit that anti-Christian doctrines are being taught on the foreign field, even as they are being taught right here in America. As Dr. Straton has said, "we will not let this issue be pigeon-holed."

Marine Uniforms From England.

In your issue of June 24 a correspondent calls attention to the following, which was recently published in The Baltimore Sun: "Marine Corps buys uniforms in England; contends it saves Government $180,000 on fibre-dyed khaki material."

I wish to quote from The Army and Navy Journal of June 16, 1923, as follows:

"The daily press and about everybody with the exception of the American manufacturers have become excited over the fact that the Marine Corps has let the contract for the manufacture of 500,000 yards of khaki cloth to an English concern. In response to a notice sent to fifty-one American manufacturers the Marine Corps received one bid, and that was at 62 cents per yard. The English concern offered to furnish the cloth at 42 cents a yard delivered in New York and pay the tariff. If the tariff were remitted the cloth could be secured from the English concern for about 28 cents per yard.

"As far as the Navy Department has been able to ascertain, the American mills are not interested in this business. The Marine Corps has made an offer to induce the American manufacturers to improve their methods of dyeing. At present it is generally recognized that the English khaki is superior to the American manufacture. American khaki fades into so many different shades that after it is washed two or three times it scarcely serves the purpose of a uniform.

"There is no doubt that the American mills can produce as good a grade of khaki as the English or any other manufacturers. At present, however, they are so busy with other business that they are paying very little attention to the Marine Corps trade. At least, this is the information which has been furnished at the Navy Department."

Now, just what would the critics have said if the American bid had been accepted—those people who talk about the extravagance and inefficiency of the services? Is there such a thing as being "damned if you do and damned if you don't"? PLEASANTS HOBBS BETTS.

Raids on National Parks.

There has lately been some discussion in your columns regarding the protection of the national parks, and it is unfortunately true that their security and permanence are very insufficiently assured, and that they are not only menaced by but are actually suffering from commercial exploitation to an extent that few realize.

But whether the remedy lies in increased participation by Congress in their management seems very doubtful, for it has been by special enactments of Congress that the three most destructive raids in the entire history of the parks have been put through; the cutting down of the size of the Yosemite Park in 1905 and again in 1906, and the more recent seizure of the beautiful Hetch-Hetchy Valley by San Francisco water power interests, masquerading under the cover of a public enterprise. Last Winter a joker in the bill for the enlargement of the Sequoia Park made a similar but fortunately unsuccessful attempt, and it will doubtless be made again.

Nothing is more true than that the only hope of keeping the parks is through incessant watchfulness on the part of the public. Not even the organizations claiming to be looking out for the safety of the parks can be too implicitly trusted, for the tentacles of the interests having schemes against the parks have penetrated many of these, and they will give neither warning nor opposition when such raids are attempted. ### Amending an Amendment.

In your editorial of Saturday last, entitled "The Volstead Limit," you at least twice suggested that a law may be passed by the next Congress making it lawful for foreign vessels to transport within the territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. We, the people, through our duly elected representatives, having written a legislative provision into the Constitution making such transportation unlawful, can Congress make it lawful? Are we not in a real dilemma? The amendment left it to Congress to define intoxicating liquors, but did not leave it to Congress to define "the territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States." It is true that Congress has put the Panama Canal Zone out of this category, so far as transportation is concerned, but that is only another illustration of the absurdities born of prohibitory legislation of this character through constitutional amendment.

If the Eighteenth Amendment had been, as it should have been, merely a provision giving Congress power to regulate or prohibit the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors, we would not now be in this absurd position before the world—and ourselves. CLIFTON F. WILLIAMSON.

Wild Grape Flowers.

Apropos of a statement to the effect that wild grape flowers lose their scent "when cut from the vine," as they are said to do by the writer of the poem, "Wild Flowers," in today's Times, I have cut them in June and found them sweet in September.

WALTER HINES PAGE HONORED IN ABBEY

Churchmen and Statesmen Unite in Hailing Him as Britain's Great Friend in Need.

LONDON, July 3 (Associated Press). Walter Hines Page, who held the post of American Amassador to Great Britain during the war, today received a place among the illustrious dead of the age in Westminster Abbey. A marble tablet commemorating his friendship and sympathy in Great Britain's greatest hour of need was unveiled by Viscount Grey of Fallodon.

Not since the Duke of York's wedding has the pantheon held a more distinguished company of men high in the councils of State or a larger or more representative gathering from the circles of both countries. The British Government was represented by the Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, and six members of his Cabinet, and the American Government by Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury; James Beck, Solicitor General; Post Wheeler, Counsellor of the Embassy, and the entire Embassy staff and Robert P. Skinner, Consul General.

As an expression of the appreciation of the British overseas dominions of Mr. Page's services in the cause of peace, the High Commissioners for Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and Newfoundland were also present.

Preceding the religious services in the Abbey, which was one of great beauty and impressiveness, Lord Grey, who probably enjoyed a closer acquaintance with Mr. Page than any other Englishman, delivered a brief dedicatory address, in which he declared that the name of Walter Hines Page should be remembered with honor and affection as that of "one who gave us invaluable help at a time when our liberty and very independence seemed at stake."

"Mr. Page," Lord Grey continued, "was inspired by a single-minded desire to make human freedom prevail among the nations of the world. His patriotism was of the noblest kind; he loved his country both for what it was and what he believed it could and would do for the benefit of mankind.

"His perception of the power of the United States, his belief in its democracy, his unfailing trust in the will of its people to do great and good things were part of his very being. It was very near to the heart that he should be between his country and ours a true knowledge and understanding, each of the other. We wish his name to be honored as one who gave us invaluable sympathy and moral support in the greatest crisis in our history.

"It is most fitting that this memorial should be in Westminster Abbey, the shrine of so much that is great, honorable and dear in our history, which not so very long ago, as time is reckoned, was as much a part of his ancestors as our own."

The Dean of Westminster conducted the service and after processional prayers and an anthem delivered an address, in which he said:

"Mr. Page did a work which the country will never forget. He was with us all through those four years and a half of world agony. We can think of no force so potent for the peace of the world as that which might be supplied by the unbounded union of good-will and understanding between the American and the British Commonwealth. For such a union, Walter Hines Page labored unremittingly.

"Did not our brothers fight and fall for the same great cause? Did we not share together in the same cup of bitterness, in the same sacrifice for the liberties of the human race? How often, my American friends, have we these Abbey walls witnessed us meeting side by side, praying for the same dear ones, offering our intercession for the same great cause? Walter Page was often here joining in our acts of worship."

After the address the Doxology was sung, followed by this Brief Apocalyptic prayer:

"O, Eternal Father, we draw nigh unto Thee in this church where our Kings and Queens are crowned. Amid the memorials of Great Britain's illustrious dead, we humbly commemorate before Thee all those who have served until death the cause of justice, truth and freedom. More especially, we praise Thee this day for the memory of Walter Page, American Ambassador and true friend of this country. And we beseech Thee that we who are gathered here, being quickened by such high example, may be strengthened to perform the duties and overcome the difficulties of our own day."

There, probably for the first time in the Abbey, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" was sung, followed by "God Save the King" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

'BLACKS' ACCLAIM FASCISM

Call on All Catholics to Support Mussolini's 'Radiant Ideal.'

ROME, July 3.—The younger generation of the "Blacks," who held office in the Vatican Party until 1870, after which they refused to enter the political or social life of the capital, have issued an appeal to all Italian Catholics to support the Fascista Government.

The appeal, drafted at a meeting in the home of Marquis Pietro Misciatelli, says that in the present political hour the nation's spiritual crisis imposes the duty upon Catholics unequivocally to proclaim their position regarding the national Government. The Government, it adds, openly acknowledges and honors those religious and social truths which form the basis of any healthy political rule and is opposed to democratic and masonic theories, inculcating the principles of discipline and order in the State, in harmony with the religious and social doctrines of the Church.

The Catholics are urged strongly to support "this radiant ideal," aiming to establish in Italy a durable social order at once Christian and Italian.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 3.—In the symposium on "Religion and Social Service" at the meeting of the Rabbinical Assembly Convention here today, S. # OK PRIZE STARTS PEACE PLAN FLOOD ## ore Than Fifty Schemes Submitted Within Two Days After $100,000 Offer.

ANY LACK PRACTICABILITY

ational Organizations and Men of Prominence to Take Part in the Contest.

More than fifty plans for the promotion of peace by the United States in operation with other nations had been received yesterday at the office of the ...rtons Peace Award, 342 Madison ...nue, two days after the announcement of Edward W. Bok's offer of a $100,000 prize for a practicable plan.

The flood of correspondence which followed the announcement has been a surprise to the staff and to Miss Esther Everett Lape, the member of the Policy Committee in charge. So far, most of the plans proposed seem to lack the quality of "practicability," insisted upon by Mr. Bok as a condition upon which half the money offered is to be awarded.

The majority of the plans proposed, it may be said, assume a change in human nature. Other suggestions have recognized the probability of combats between nations. One suggestion has been made for a revival of the feudal idea of settling by champions, and proposed that disputes between nations be settled by battle between picked groups without involving the general populations of the two countries.

A number of organizations, which have been invited to help in the matter, have made tentative acceptances, which, it is expected, will be followed by formal replies. The co-operation of a large number of national organizations has already been assured. In addition, men of national and international consequence have agreed to work upon plans for submission in the contest.

Miss Lape said that one of the first definite steps to be taken by the Policy Committee was the formulation of the conditions of the contest, particularly the provision defining practicability, which will be an essential in awarding the full prize to any plan received. Miss Lape added that a decision on the contest would be reached by the committee within two or three weeks and that the conditions would then be made public at once, so that contestants could revise and submit plans with full knowledge of how they would be considered for the award.

Frank Polk, a lawyer with offices at 61 Broadway, predicted that the contest would bring at least 10,000 suggestions. "The Bok offer of a large prize should result in some comprehensive plan," he said. "It will also afford a symposium of a cross section of American public opinion on the most feasible method of participation of the United States in concert with Europe in solving a proposition which would commend itself to the consideration of the country. It will focus public opinion upon the views of publicists and others as to the best methods of international co-operation at the present moment, and may also eventuate in some new and original suggestion being made."

FFERS LADD PLAN OF 1840.

H. Smith Submits House Resolution in Peace Prize Contest.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 3.—Roderick H. Smith, Trustee of the American Money Enterprise, today announced that he had entered in competition for the Edward W. Bok $100,000 American Peace award, House resolution 312, of March 20, 1922, which Mr. Smith claims authorship.

House resolution 312, Mr. Smith explained, is the World Court plan of 1840, brought up to date. In 1840, he said, the proposed Court and Congress of Nations plan was not put into practical shape for action by Congress. Mr. Smith says that the revised plan as set forth in the Congressional resolution does away with that difficulty.

In a letter to Mr. Bok, which Mr. Smith said had been forwarded today, he explains that the revised Ladd plan was first offered to Congress in 1912. He observes "it holds W. J. Bryan's panacea recipe for this Court and Congress of Nations plan." The revised plan was first written by him in 1911, he said.

MISS BOLCHI BENJAMIN WEDS IN LONDON TODAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 3.—Miss Anna Marie Bolchi Benjamin, adopted daughter of the late Park Benjamin, will be married tomorrow at Corpus Christi Church, Maiden Lane, London, to Arthur Louis Fullman. Mr. Fulman, who was Mr. Benjamin's lawyer, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today that he had been acquainted with Miss Benjamin for some years, but had only got to know her well last year. He had been engaged to her for some months.

"We are getting married over here," he said, "merely because it is more convenient. Miss Benjamin is Italian by birth and came over here to visit some relatives. I crossed rather unexpectedly on some law business, but since I was here, we thought we might as well get married here. We are neither of us children, and neither has parents living, so there was no reason to prevent it."

The wedding will be a quiet one and after it Mr. Fullman and his bride will travel in France before returning to New York.

Miss Benjamin is the adopted daughter of the late Park Benjamin, noted patent lawyer, who was the father-in-law of the late Enrico Caruso. In his will Mr. Benjamin, who bitterly opposed his daughter's marriage to the tenor, cut off each of his five children with a dollar, leaving $60,000 outright to his adopted daughter, one of Mrs. Caruso's governess, and bequeathing a residuary estate estimated at about $500,000 to her upon the death of his wife. The wife has since died. The estate was tied up for a time by litigation started by the Benjamin children in an effort to share in the inheritance. The dispute over the estate was settled out of court under terms which were not made public.

ALLIES WILL DEBATE ALL TURKISH ISSUES

NOW HAVE INSTRUCTIONS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAUSANNE, July 3.—It is believed that all the Allies have now received instructions from their Governments, so that their collective note to the Turks may be expected at a very early date.

This morning the Financial and Economic Committees met and succeeded in incorporating practically all the minor outstanding points in the treaty, which may therefore be regarded as complete with exception of the three vital questions of Ottoman Debt coupons, concessions and evacuation.

The discussions this morning turned largely on such questions as the share of the Ottoman Debt to be imposed upon the succession States. Thus, should Greece be saddled with a portion of that debt for the territory around Demotika, which was ceded to Bulgaria in 1915, ex-Premier Venizelos said "no," because no stipulation on the subject had been made at the time, and the matter has apparently been left open.

M. Venizelos and Ismet Pasha are discussing privately the question of recognition by Greece of the damage done by the Greek army in Asia Minor.

Sir Horace Rumbold, for the British Government, made declaration to the effect that the liquidation of Turkish properties in Egypt would not include those of the ex-Khedive, Abbas Hilmi Pasha, which would have to be dealt with separately.

LAUSANNE, July 3 (Associated Press).—Replying to Ismet Pasha's protest of yesterday, the Allies have accepted his challenge to discuss at one sitting of the Near East Conference all the outstanding questions as soon as final instructions are received from their respective Governments.

They also deprecated Ismet's action in communicating his protest to the press before sending it to the Allies, and maintained that they had always sought to solve the financial problems with due consideration for Turkey's financial condition, but, contrary to Ismet's allegation, they had never promised any special facilities, they always understood that it was impossible to settle the Ottoman Debt problem by imposing conditions upon the bondholders different from those of the loan contracts.

With regard to the evacuation of foreign troops from Turkish territory, the Allies reiterate that they are favorably disposed, but always subject to a solution of the problems of concessions and the Ottoman Debt.

ACCUSE ACCOUNTANT OF $194,600 THEFT

CONFESSED, POLICE SAY

Declares He Lost in Wall Street Speculation — Will Be Arraigned Tomorrow.

Jens C. Olsen, formerly a well-known resident of the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, was locked up in Police Headquarters last night, in connection with the shortage of $194,600 in the accounts of the Franz Sheppard Publishing Company, at 148 Lafayette Street, for which he was an accountant for twelve years when he disappeared on May 6, 1920.

Olsen was arrested on Monday in Chicago by Lieutenant Detective James J. Gegan of the Bomb Squad on a bench warrant issued in General Sessions in the Summer of 1920 on indictments charging grand larceny and forgery in connection with the shortage. The indictment specifically charged the theft of $3,000 from the Sheppard Company, but according to Gegan, when he arrested Olsen and told him that expert accountants had found a shortage of $194,600 the prisoner said: "I didn't think it was more than $100,000."

The Grand Jury investigation of the shortage was based on the complaint of Reid Kathan, President and principal owner of the publishing company. Mr. Kathan told Gegan that Olsen, who formerly lived at 82 Seventy-sixth Street, Bay Ridge, disappeared the day following Mr. Kathan's announcement to him that he was going to incorporate the company and had arranged to have expert accountants go over the books.

Mr. Kathan said that no suspicion attached to Olsen at the time. The accountants, it is said, discovered that thefts amounting to almost $200,000 had been going on. It was not until then that Olsen's absence aroused suspicion.

Mr. Kathan had been under the impression that he had become suddenly ill. He called on Commissioner Enright, a personal friend, and Lieutenant Gegan took him to the Grand Jury. The indictments followed.

Nothing was heard of Olsen until last week, when Lieutenant Gegan received information that he was with his wife and two children in Chicago. Gegan said that Olsen told him that before his flight he had sold several racing cars and other available assets for $4,000 and that was all the money he had when he parted from his wife and children and started for Australia. Gegan also said that Olsen told him he had used most of the money he had taken from the firm in speculations in Wall Street, where he had margin accounts with two brokerage firms. He will be taken to the Tombs this morning and tomorrow will be arraigned in General Sessions to face the indictments.

Fight Returns at Church Picnic.

The radio will be used today at a church picnic in the Bronx to give the results of the Dempsey-Gibbons prize fight at Shelby, Mont. The Church of our Lady of Solace, Van Nest and White Plains Avenues, will have its annual picnic on the baseball grounds of the Catholic Protectorate, on Tremont Avenue. The Rev. Daniel J. Curley, Bishop of Syracuse, former Rector of Our Lady of Solace, will attend.

MacMILLAN SAILS NORTH.

Explorer Hopes to Determine Whether New "Ice Age" Is Coming.

SYDNEY, N. S., July 3.—Captain Donald B. MacMillan, Arctic explorer, and his picked crew of six sailed for the Far North tonight on the Bowdoin on another long cruise. The primary object is to determine if possible whether another "ice age" is in the process of formation. The advance of glaciers in the last seventy years has indicated this, and Captain MacMillan hopes to bring back the scientific proof.

He also intends to make a further study of terrestrial magnetism and atmospheric electricity. His craft is equipped with a powerful radio sending outfit, and he will send out messages to determine whether radio can be sent through the northern lights.

Captain MacMillan's crew includes Ralph Robinson of Haverhill, Mass., chief assistant; Thomas McCue of Brigus, N. F., mate; Richard Goddard of Winthrop, Mass., Carnegie Institute observer; Donald Mix of Bristol, Conn., radio operator; W. F. Lewis of Lynn, Mass., cook, and John Jaynes of Somerville, Mass., engineer. Lakes Bay, a dog team driver, will be picked up on the coast of Labrador.

Stocks of Fireworks Considered Dangerous Are Seized and Venders Summoned.

RECORD EXODUS FROM CITY

Railroads Estimate That 1,600,000 New Yorkers Will Spend the Day at Resorts.

New York's Fourth, if plans of the authorities go through, will be soundless, safe and sane. Confiscation of fireworks, begun yesterday, will be continued today. All patrolmen have been cautioned to be on the lookout for explosive celebrations in the streets.

However, up to midnight last night, one child had been killed and eight persons injured as a result of preliminary celebrations.

Police Lieutenant Hinners, 39 years old, of 539 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, was injured last night when a revolver, brought into the Oak Street Station after the arrest of two boys, exploded. The bullet penetrated his right hand.

Agatina Bonacorro, 16 years old, 17 Monroe Street, and Frank Ruggeri, 15, 9 Oliver Street, were arrested last night by Patrolman Victor Robbins of the Oak Street Station, who, it is alleged, found them firing blank cartridges with a .22-calibre revolver. The patrolman placed the pistol on the desk, and as the Lieutenant picked it up it went off. The Lieutenant was treated at the Beekman Street Hospital and returned to duty.

Shortly before the arrest of the boys, Michael Lamartina, 19 years old, 9 Monroe Street, was wounded in the right cheek by a stray .22 calibre bullet as he was standing in front of 4 Monroe Street. The shot is believed to have been fired by a person engaged in a preliminary celebration of the Fourth.

Firecrackers resulted in the death last night in Roosevelt Hospital of Charles Carty, 2 years old, 420 West Fifty-sixth Street. Albert Jelalion, 39 years old, 723 Eighth Avenue, was severely burned on both hands while attempting to save the child.

The child, with other small boys, had been playing with matches and firecrackers in his home. A match set fire to his clothing. As he ran screaming to the street, Jelalion, seized him, tore away the burning clothing and hurried him in a taxicab to the hospital. Jelalion left after treatment.

Patsy Lambaise, 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 353 East Third Street, was injured in the right hand by an exploding cannon cracked. He was treated at Bellevue Hospital.

Mary McNeill, 15 years old, 286 St. Ann's Avenue, the Bronx, was shot in the neck by an unidentified person as she entered St. Mary's Park, near St. Ann's Avenue and 141st Street. The girl suddenly swooned after hearing explosions and heard a loud report. Patrolman Whalen hurried her to Lincoln Hospital.

A firecracker thrown by a boy into the operator's room of the Paradise Moving Picture Theatre, 810 Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn, last night, is believed to have caused a fire which destroyed more than 1,500 feet of film. The show was stopped while Robert Jaspert, the operator, extinguished the flames. The audience did not know there was a fire until the apparatus arrived.

Three boys were injured in Newark yesterday by fireworks and a gun. Joseph Bienio, 13 years old, of 52 Fourteenth Avenue, was taken to the Newark City Hospital after a gun, he explained, injuring his right hand. The other boys injured are Daniel C. Appellio, 15 years old, of 47 Cutler Street, and John Sibilia, 16 years old, of 580 North Seventh Street.

Salvatore Zazzo, 8 years old, of 65 Garside Street, Newark, died in the City Hospital there yesterday from injuries incurred last Sunday while playing with a gun.

This year's drive on fireworks included a ban on the "electric sparklers," permitted last year. Enforcement of the fireworks ordinances devolved on a staff of inspectors sent out by Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Drennan and Chief Thomas J. Hayes of the Bureau of Fire Prevention. Commissioner Drennan said he had the situation well in hand, although he found evidences of much "bootlegging" in the noise-making.

Inspectors confiscated fireworks in Park Row, lower Broadway, Park Place, Nassau Street, Chambers Street, Forty-second Street, 125th Street and the Bronx. Summonses were issued to the venders. Chief Inspector McCabe of the Division of Combustibles, assisted by Inspectors Callahan and Lenihan, issued a summons in Park Row to Michael Pocello of 43 Tenth Avenue, Brooklyn. A Chambers Street midget dealer, merchant, David Blatman of 427 Cherry Street, Manhattan, also got a summons. Both were selling "sparklers." The inspectors said the crowds sympathized with the men and that spectators jeered service of the summonses.

The Fourth always marks the apex of the Coney Island season and plans were made yesterday to handle 200,000 persons. Captain Patrick Handley, in charge of Brooklyn detectives, said that he would have 215 men mingling with the crowds bound toward the shore and that twenty additional men would go to Coney to aid the twelve on duty there.

Expect New Peak of Travel Today.

At the New York Central offices it was explained that while the peak of holiday travel had been reached Friday and Saturday, when 500,000 persons left the city, a second peak was developing with the climax expected this morning. An additional 100,000 persons were expected to leave last night. Several hundred day coaches were stationed at strategic points in the Grand Central yards and fifty Pullmans were in reserve. One of the heaviest traveled routes was to Montreal.

Extra heavy traffic was reported on the New York, New Haven & Hartford. Officials said seventeen extra sections went out yesterday, and that special sections today would number twenty-eight, nine going out and nineteen inbound. Since Thursday the Bar Harbor Express has been run in four sections and the train leaving Boston at midnight last night was in four sections. New Haven officials reported that 7,000 campers had been carried to 159 camps in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Their estimated total number carried by their lines as about the total of the New York Central.

Record Throng Hinges on Weather.

In the five-day period at last year, the Long Island Railway carried 1,500,000 passengers. If today's weather prediction of fair and cloudy is carried out, officials of the road expect that figure to be exceeded slightly. Traffic to Long Beach and the Rockaways broke all records.

The Pennsylvania System had all its spare equipment mobilized and on Saturday a new record for travel out of the Pennsylvania Station was established, 733 trains, of 5,364 cars in all leaving. On the Saturday before Memorial Day 713 trains were on the schedule. The next greatest number of cars hauled out of the station was 5,105, on Sept. 22, 1922.

New Jersey railroads also reported big business. The roads there, notably the Erie, were required to handle immigrants arriving at Ellis Island. On Monday night 500 immigrants were taken to the Erie terminus, whence they started on their way to the Far West by special train.

Fireworks Explosion Starts $150,000 Fire in Vermont

HARDWICK, Vt., July 3.—Fire wiped out the heart of the business section of Hardwick early today, destroying five business blocks and two tenements, and driving ten families from their homes in their night clothing. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

The fire started from an explosion of fireworks in a small store directly beneath the barber shop of A. J. Roy, and the flames were quickly beyond control.

Firemen from Barre, Montpelier and Morrisville responded to calls for help and Company D, 172d Infantry, was rushed by special train from St. Johnsbury.

DAY'S PROGRAM HEAVY.

Governor to Speak Twice—Churches Plan Exercises.

A long program of events, with many churches co-operating, is scheduled for today's safe and sane celebrators. Chief among the events is the annual celebration by the Tammany Society, the program getting under way at 10 A. M. at Fourteenth Street. It probably will be the last time the day is celebrated in the present "wigwam."

Due to the possibility that Governor Smith may be a factor in the Democratic convention, his speech today will be broadcast by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. John H. Voorhis, Grand Sachem of Tammany, will preside, and other speakers will be United States Senator Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia, Representative Finis J. Garrett of Tennessee, Democratic leader in the House; Representative Henry B. Hawes of St. Louis, and Representative James A. Gallivan of Boston.

This afternoon Governor Smith will deliver the principal address when ground is broken, at 3 P. M., for the Veterans' Memorial Hospital, which is to cost $1,500,000. The Governor's party will go direct from the "Wigwam" to Floral Park, whence it will motor to Kings Park. The Governor will have a military escort from Company K, Fourteenth Infantry, under Captain Reginald L. Van De Water. The Governor will decorate fifteen medal winners of Company K.

The James Monroe Memorial Association, formed to buy the late President's home at Lafayette and Prince Streets, will start a celebration at 10:25 A. M., when special service will be conducted in St. Paul's Chapel by the vicar of Trinity, the Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McComas. President Monroe was buried from the chapel. A parade will be held from City Hall Plaza at 11 A. M. Speakers at the former Presidential home will be Oscar S. Straus, Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright and military men. Representatives of the Old Guard, Sons of the Revolution and the American Flag Association will participate.

K. of C. Ceremony in Central Park.

Independence Day will be observed at the Mall, Central Park, by the Charles Carroll General Assembly of the Knights of Columbus. Fourth degree Knights will attend in uniform. The observance will start with a parade from the Catholic Club, 120 Central Park South, at 9:30 A. M. The invocation at the Mall will be by the Rev. Daniel C. Cunnion, chaplain of the Catholic Protectory. Speakers will include Arthur J. W. Hilly, Assistant Corporation Counsel, and Peter W. Collins of Boston, a national lecturer of the fraternal organization. Music will be furnished by two bands and the Police Glee Club. The Declaration of Independence will be read by Louis A. Dinan.

The eleventh annual celebration by the University Forum of America and the Citizens' Republican Club will be held at 8:30 P. M. at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, Riverside Drive and Eighty-ninth Street. Ward's Band will play and operatic selections will be delivered by Maurice Mattfeld. Dr. Alexander Cummings of the Forum will be Chairman. Dr. Charles A. Eastman, a Sioux chief; Major A. L. Boyce of Boyce's Tigers; Lieutenant Richard J. Murray, Commander of the West End Post, American Legion, and James F. McDermott, Commander of Steinhamp Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Under the same auspices a band concert will be held at 8:30 A. M. in the Children's Playground, Riverside Drive and Ninety-seventh Street, and at 4:30 P. M. at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument.

Jews Announce Many Fetes.

The American Jewish Relief Committee of 103 Park Avenue announced that the Fourth would be celebrated in Moscow where Russian refugee children are being cared for under direction of Dr. Boris Bogen. The relief workers will receive an American flag made by the children.

Jewish institutions have arranged programs, according to the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, which said that Controller Charles L. Craig would be the speaker at Surprise Lake Camp, Cold Spring, N. Y.

LONDON, July 3.—The British-American Dance Club, a social off-shoot of the English-Speaking Union, held a dance this evening to celebrate Independence Day. Viscount and Lady Astor received the guests, who included the American Chargé d'Affaires and Mrs. Post Wheeler.

Tomorrow being Independence Day, extensive preparations have been made in the West End of London to celebrate the occasion by gala dinners and dancing. The chief official event is a reception in the afternoon by Post Wheeler, American Chargé d'Affaires, who will receive some two thousand Americans at Lansdowne House, lent by Gordon Selfridge as the only private residence capable of holding the number of Americans who wish to be present.

MILLERAND TO HARDING.

Says French Nation Associates Itself With Independence Day.

PARIS, July 3 (Associated Press).—President Millerand of France sent a Fourth of July cablegram today to President Harding saying that "with ever renewed enthusiasm the French nation associates itself with all its heart with American Independence Day."

Further in his message the French President said:

"The anniversary recalls the hardships you sustained in achieving national liberty and the sufferings France and the United States endured jointly to preserve the freedom of the world. The French nation can never remain indifferent to the manifestation evoking them.

"In the name of France I address to you, Mr. President, with the hope that the mutual affection uniting our two peoples will become closer and be more deeply felt, an expression of our sincere wishes for the prosperity of your country."

DENIES POLITICS IN PATENT SALES

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 3.—Francis P. Garvan, former Custodian of Alien Property, and now President of the Chemical Foundation, Inc., continued today his testimony to show that the Foundation's public purposes have been fully carried out, and that no profits have accrued to it.

The Government is suing before Federal Judge Morris to cancel the transfer by Mr. Garvan, as Custodian, of 4,500 seized German dye and chemical patents to the foundation for $250,000.

The session was marked by a sharp controversy between opposing counsel, after the Court had remarked that much time could have been saved had the attorneys been able to agree on certain facts which were obvious.

The defense asserted that the Government easily could have agreed at the outset that a German dye monopoly was maintained in this country before the war, instead of putting the defense to the necessity of proof, and Isidor J. Kresel, foundation counsel, charged that the Government was trying to keep out the truth about that monopoly.

Colonel Henry W. Anderson, Government attorney, denied this, and insisted there must be no effort by the defense to dictate how the Government should conduct its case. He emphasized that the Government based its case largely on points of law, and declared that "four-fifths of the evidence produced here is as immaterial to this case as a work on astronomy."

Tells of Educational Work.

Mr. Garvan said the foundation financed and distributed 580,240 copies of a pamphlet entitled, "An Exhibit Under the Auspices of the National Research Council With the Co-operation of the Chemical War Service of the Army." This was printed to show the relation between organic chemistry and national defense. The foundation sent to schools throughout the United States 75,000 copies of a chemistry pamphlet issued by the Department of the Interior.

As evidence of the foundation's claim that it is not a money-making institution, Mr. Garvan compared the income of domestic sales of dyes covered by the foundation patents with sales of dyes not so covered, saying that from 1916 to 1921, inclusive, dyes not so covered sold for $202,496,560, while the foundation dye patents recorded sales of only $370,279.

Mr. Garvan said the Custodian assigned to the foundation a total of 6,476 properties, such as patents, trade-marks and copyrights, which resulted in income from two sources on such as were income producing. Income was derived from manufacture and royalties imposed. Between April 10, 1919, when the first batch of properties was received by the foundation, and Dec. 31 last, income from manufacture totaled $296,213 and imports yielded $366,462 from licenses of patents. In the same period the foundation collected $2,442 on contracts and $11,196 on trade-marks, making a grand total of $675,345. The annual average gross return on each property was $28.02, and the annual average expenditure per property was $28.74, leaving a deficit of 72 cents.

Two weeks after relinquishing the custodianship to Colonel Thomas W. Miller, Mr. Garvan testified, he detailed the status and purposes of the Chemical Foundation to Colonel Miller, who signed the bill of complaint in the present action.

Declared Foundation Non-Political.

"I explained to him that it was not as a dye industry that we were interested in it," said the witness. "It was only because the dye industry was the post graduate school of organic chemistry. I told him there were no politics in it; that both Republicans and Democrats throughout the war had worked shoulder to shoulder. I told him the Republican Ways and Means Committee had favorably reported on protecting the industry and had passed a protective embargo, and that the Finance Committee of the Senate and Mr. Longworth of the House and Senator Knox of the Senate had been our stalwart friends and that the only people who seemed to be against the industry were people whose motives would not bear the full light of day.

"I asked him to become a Director and asked him if, after six or eight months, when he had studied the subject, he would not then take over the burden from me and continue it, as I had continued it while I was Alien Property Custodian.

"Colonel Miller was elected a Director. My impression is he agreed to become President, Colonel Miller did not serve as Director, resigning shortly after notification of his election."

In cross-examination Mr. Garvan said he did not know that France was using and had propaganda funds in the United States and that during the war the United States had propaganda funds both here and abroad. He said he was not aware that large American industrial companies maintained schools.

In the direct examination the witness had said his investigations for A. Mitchell Palmer, his predecessor as Custodian, revealed a vast German espionage system in the United States and an educational system in Germany whereby the German Government financed in large part the training of university graduates in dye factories and took other steps in a program of inspiring in young Germans a realization of the value of chemistry to the nation. These were among the facts that led toward the patent seizures.

Admitting that the patents seized covered only 4 or 5 per cent. of the dye industry in the United States, Mr. Garvan added that these composed the essential part of the industry.

Mr. Garvan said he conceived the Chemical Foundation, which was the outgrowth of orders by Mr. Palmer to him and Joseph H. Choate Jr. to work out a feasible plan to solve the chemical and dye patents situation.

"Mr. Garvan, don't you know the charter of the Chemical Foundation was drawn by Mr. Prindle, counsel for the du Pont Company?" asked Colonel Anderson.

"No, I do not," answered the witness.

Mr. Garvan said plans for seizure of the patents and their sale to the Foundation followed conferences between representatives of Mr. Palmer and manufacturers. There was no written contract between the custodian and the Foundation.

"Don't you know that a verbal contract by an officer of the Government is not binding on the Government?" asked Colonel Anderson.

"I do not," replied Mr. Garvan.

"How did you arrive at the price of $250,000?" was asked.

"One reason was that the patents were worthless unless some concern put up a royalty plant and found out how to work them," Mr. Garvan replied. "Another reason was that licenses were to be non-exclusive. A third element was that nobody could get more than 4 per cent. on their money. We were absolutely obligated to give a license to the Government. We had to trustee all the common stock for seventeen years."

Madden Plans to Cut Army Posts to 60; House Chairman Favors Sale of Presidio

Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, who was in New York last night getting ready to sail on the Leviathan today, said that he intended to introduce a bill at the next session of Congress to cut down the appropriations for the army. Mr. Madden said that he would recommend cutting down the number of army posts from 240 to 60.

"There is no need for so many army posts scattered all over the country," he declared. "They don't perform any essential service and their overhead expense is enormous. My recommendations as to these posts are in conformity with the wishes of the Secretary of War. The excess posts were created during the war and now we do not need them."

Mr. Madden said that he believed the Presidio on the Pacific Coast should be sold. He added that the army had no real use for it, but it was worth about $30,000,000 and its sale would be proper. He added that he favored adequate air service and anti-aircraft guns for the Panama Canal Zone.

The Congressman, who recently visited Porto Rico, said he thought that the Porto Ricans who desired independence at once failed to realise all that this country was doing for them. He said that the United States returned the internal revenue and customs taxes for the use of the schools in Porto Rico, which the Federal Government does not do for any State in the Union.

TRI-POWER ACCORD ON NAVIES PROPOSED

SENTIMENT HERE ADVERSE

Washington Prefers to Await French Action—Poincare to Press Treaties in Chamber.

TOKIO, July 3 (Associated Press).—Japan has decided to approach America and Great Britain with a view of reaching a tri-party agreement to enforce the provisions of the Washington naval treaty, without awaiting ratification by France, it was asserted confidently today in Japanese newspapers, which print statements believed to be reliable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—No official information has reached the State Department from the Japanese Government to the effect that Japan would like to make a tripartite agreement with the United States and Great Britain to put into effect the provisions of the five-power naval treaty, which still awaits ratification by France. This fact was developed at the State Department today in response to inquiries by newspaper men.

Officials intimated that this Government is hopeful that France will ratify the Washington treaties and that no three-party agreement will be necessary. It was pointed out that the Washington agreements will become effective only when ratifications have been exchanged by all the signatories, and any modification of the number of these signatories naturally would call for new agreements, which, in turn, would require the approval of the Senate. In view of this fact, the desire of the American Government that France should ratify is easily explained.

While no official word has been received in Washington confirming reports of the intention of the Japanese Government to approach the United States and Great Britain on this subject, it is known here that for months there has been an active agitation in Japan to hasten putting the treaties into effect. So great is this agitation that a telegram being held up by lack of final confirmation of the naval treaty, but all the powers have been put to great inconvenience through the failure of France to take final action.

This has been particularly true in the case of the nine-power treaties affecting China, it having been the intention of the powers to go into the economic and financial condition of China very thoroughly when the representatives of the powers would meet in the tariff conference in China, which, under the Washington agreements, was to have been called within three months after the exchange of ratifications.

Should France decline to ratify the treaties, however, it is believed that the Harding Administration would be willing to agree to a three-power naval treaty, limiting naval arrangements on the basis of 5—5—3.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 3.—Premier Poincaré is hopeful that within the next ten days he will be able to obtain ratification of the Washington Naval and Pacific treaties by the Chamber of Deputies.

Having got the budget out of the road at last, the Chamber now has time to attend to other matters, and foremost among these, in the Premier's opinion, should come the Washington accords. His present intention is to keep the Chamber and Senate in session until July 15, during which period negotiations with England, and as there is very little routine work scheduled, he fully expects to succeed with his project.

The special commission of the Chamber which has been examining the accords has so far reported favorably, with certain reservations as to the construction of submarines, and it is expected that there will be little opposition to their ratification.

On the other hand, the Government entertains that such action will tend to lessen apprehension as to the military designs and spirit of France, and show a real desire to follow the lead in disarmament.

FOCH MESSAGE TO LEGION.

French War Hero Repeats Sentiments of Sincere Attachment.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 3.—France at the present time is fighting for the same principles as are upheld by the American Legion, Marshal Foch declared in an Independence Day message received at national headquarters of the Legion here today.

The message from the French war hero follows:

"I am happy to repeat to the American Legion on the occasion of Independence Day my sentiments of sincere attachment.

"The Legion has demonstrated that it remains faithful to the principles that governed its foundation. These principles are those for which France is fighting at this time. The Legion has recognized this fact and our common action as in the days of the past for the defense of right in the world can not fail to continue to work for the highest welfare of our two countries."

GRAND JURY TO HEAR TWO ANDERSON AIDS

ARE HELPING PROSECUTION

Conferred Three Weeks With District Attorney's Office on Alleged False Bill and Other Accusations.

O. Bertsall Phillips and William M. Potter, formerly Financial Agent and Assistant Treasurer of the Anti-Saloon League, will be the principal witnesses before the Grand Jury on Monday when it begins the new investigation of the allegation that William H. Anderson, Superintendent of the League, obtained $24,700 from the organization on a fictitious bill for "confidential publicity promotion."

It was learned yesterday that for three weeks Mr. Phillips and Mr. Potter had been aiding First Assistant District Attorney Pecora in an examination of the League's books in connection with the alleged false bill and Mr. Phillips's additional charges that Anderson compelled him to "split" commissions on contributions to the League over a certain amount and had transferred on the books items showing these payments to Phillips's expense account.

District Attorney Banton said an examination of the books of the League sustained important features of Phillips's story, and he considered this corroboration sufficient to justify his asking the Grand Jury for indictments.

Mr. Phillips and Mr. Potter went over the books with Mr. Pecora in District Attorney Banton's office and explained many entries heretofore a puzzle to the District Attorney's assistant.

When Mr. Pecora several months ago made a preliminary investigation of Mr. Phillips's charges against Anderson, which subsequently led to the first inquiry before a Grand Jury he had not conferred with either Mr. Phillips or Mr. Potter about the book entries. Later, Mr. Pecora found that both former employees of the League could elucidate certain entries which were not believed at first to bear on the investigation of the Superintendent.

Mr. Anderson, at Mr. Pecora's original inquiry, made a lengthy explanation of the manner in which he received $24,700 in advance of the receipt of the money from the League and the means by which he alleged he had obtained the money from an outside source, which he used in the League's "confidential publicity promotion" scheme. When he refused further to explain certain of his statements, Mr. Pecora decided to lay the matter before the Grand Jury.

The Rev. Dr. George Caleb Moor, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, and Secretary of the League's Board of Directors, also has been subpoenaed to appear Monday, it was reported. District Attorney Banton admitted last Monday that Miss Maud M. Odell, Mr. Anderson's assistant in the League's office, had been subpoenaed.

It was not believed that Dr. David James Burrell, President of the League, and pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, would accept District Attorney Banton's invitation to appear at the inquiry. It was learned that the prosecutor's office yesterday that a subpoena would not be issued for him, as he is in poor health.

BALDWIN TO RECEIVE MELLON TOMORROW

LONDON, July 3 (Associated Press).—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, is keeping aloof from the European political turmoil during his visit here but is quietly watching the progress of the reparation negotiations through the newspapers from his secluded room in a London hotel. Secretary Mellon expects to meet Prime Minister Baldwin and other members of the Cabinet informally during the week and is likely to take occasion to discuss the problems in which the two countries are especially interested, including the irritating liquor question.

So far Mr. Mellon has devoted most of his time to visiting old-time friends, motoring in the suburbs and making purchases in the London shops. With his daughter, Miss Ailsa Mellon, he attended a dance last evening given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Brook House, in Park Lane, which she has taken for the season. This afternoon he was to attend the unveiling of the Pare Memorial, and tomorrow will take part in the Fourth of July ceremonies at the American Embassy.

Thursday afternoon the Secretary will talk over the teacups at No. 10 Downing Street with Prime Minister Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin. He will spend the latter part of the week automobiling over the English country roads.

LIBERAL DRY LAW FAVORED BY MACK

National Committeeman Believes It Will Be a Plank in Democratic Platform.

FORD'S SHADOW IN POLITICS

Dangerous to Underestimate His Strength, Declares Buffalo Man.

Contrary to the view expressed by many Democratic leaders in other parts of the country, Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, who for almost a generation has been a Democratic National Committeeman from this State, said yesterday that in his opinion the Democratic National Convention next year would insert in its platform a plank pledging the party, in the event of victory, to liberalisation of the Volstead law.

Mr. Mack said that the Democratic South, where prohibition sentiment is stronger perhaps than in any other section of the United States, might safely be left out of the reckoning. The "dry" Democratic States below the Mason and Dixon line, Mr. Mack believes, can be depended upon to run true to form and line up for the Democratic candidate, regardless of Democratic platform pledges.

Whether the "liberal" plank would be for "light wines and beer" or merely provide for relaxing the law as to permit the various States to fix for themselves within reasonable bounds the maximum of alcoholic content in beverages classed as non-intoxicants, Mr. Mack would not predict. Many Democrats favor the latter course as one that would enable voters in the several States to determine for themselves at a referendum what shall constitute an "intoxicating" beverage and as such be proscribed in their respective States.

"I believe," said Mr. Mack, "that the Democratic National platform will carry a plank calling for liberalisation of the Volstead law.

"I think it would be of great advantage to the Democratic party to take its stand firmly in favor of a more liberal interpretation of the Eighteenth Amendment. All the powerful Eastern seaboard States want the Volstead law modified. The greatest opposition to modification of the law comes from Western States which are Republican under normal conditions.

"The great industrial States, such as New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois and Wisconsin, are all swinging around to the idea that the present 'dry' law is too drastic.

"South Democratic Anyway."

"As for the 'dry' Democratic States in the solid South, they will go Democratic anyway. I think with such a plank in their platform the Democrats would have an excellent chance of electing a President next year.

"The Republicans will renominate President Harding. The President has made a good record and I regard him as pretty strong."

Mr. Mack said there was great danger in underestimating the strength of Henry Ford as a contender for the Democratic nomination.

"Mr. Ford undoubtedly is very popular with the masses," Mr. Mack said. "I notice that in the Literary Digest poll Ford has 250 votes to 700 for McAdoo. Considering the votes which were made among Democratic officials, it is a surprising showing for Ford. I do not think Henry Ford would be a candidate on a third ticket."

What, in your estimation are the prospects of Governor Smith getting the nomination?" Mr. Mack was asked.

"'Al' Smith may not be the Democratic nominee," Mr. Mack replied, "but the record he has made as a votegetter is surely to commend him to the leaders at the Democratic National Convention as a serious contender."

Mr. Mack called on Governor Smith and had a talk with him at his suite in The Baltimore early yesterday evening. During the afternoon he visited Tammany Hall but did not see Tammany leader Murphy. Mr. Murphy did not arrive at his desk until after Mr. Mack had left although the Democratic National Committeeman waited an hour or more for the purpose of having a talk with him.

Mr. Mack said he breakfasted with William J. Bryan at Buffalo a few days ago. They have always been friendly. Mr. Mack, having advocated the nomination of Mr. Bryan at a time the Nebraskan carried the Democratic party with him to disastrous defeat. In 1906, the year of Mr. Bryan's latest Presidential venture, Mr. Mack, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, conducted his campaign.

Mr. Mack will sail for Europe this morning on the Leviathan and expects to remain abroad some weeks.

COUZENS BACKS UP HIS ATTACK ON DRYS

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 3.—Charges that the Anti-Saloon League is opposed to the interests of the people and is not performing the function for which it was organized when it condemns beverages containing more than one-half of 1 per cent. of alcohol were made today by Senator James Couzens in reply to Representative Frank Hudson of the Sixth Congressional District.

The Senator declared no more attention should be paid to the league than to any other group of lobbyists blindly promoting something they wrongly thought beneficial to the public. He denied he was a traitor to the Republican Party in advocating 5 per cent. beer, as charged by Mr. Hudson.

"My stand on convictions are wrong," declared Mr. Couzens today, "but I will have to stand for the results, as I stand for the results of my own conduct. Fortunately, I have not had to live off the money collected by the Anti-Saloon League, as have some of my vigorous opponents.

"I believe the league accomplished its purpose when it disposed of the saloon, and for its work in that direction I am for it. When, however, the league attempts to say anything in excess of one-half of 1 per cent. alcoholic content is intoxicating, and attempts to raise millions of dollars to elect representatives who will agree with it, then I say it is going far afield and is not in any way performing the function for which it was organized.

"Just why these radical prohibitionists should insist upon confusing the public mind as to my attitude I do not know, unless it is to cloud the issue. Nothing I have said or done indicates any desire on my part to violate the Eighteenth Amendment, or to let down on the enforcement of the law. As for these, I stand squarely on my record as a public officer.

"The people may disagree with me and vote me out of office, but neither of these things is as important to me as to be able to express myself freely with a clear conscience. Nothing I have said, or ever will say or do, will be for the purpose of letting down on the enforcement of any law. I stand squarely on the Constitution and for law enforcement, but as a citizen, not only as a public citizen, but as a public officer, to suggest any amendment to a law which I think is to the best interests of the people."

Senator Couzens laughed at Representative Hudson's charge that he was a traitor to the Republican Party.

"I do not recall that I made any pledges to the Republican Party or to the people of Michigan that I have broken," he said.

Deer Invade Peach Orchards; Ravage Long Island Farms

Fourteen deer, in close formation and apparently unafraid, invaded the peach orchard of John H. Jones of Yaphank, L. I., yesterday and nibbled the tender new leaves off Mr. Jones's peach trees unmindful of his efforts to drive them away. Deer have been reported to be plentiful in the middle part of the Island recently and complaints have been made of their depredations as far east as Bay Harbor.

Long Island farmers, finding the animals a destructive factor that is reaching serious proportions, are not greatly impressed by the picturesque aspect of little herds of them roaming the fields, and they are beginning to advocate a prolonged open season for deer on the Island, instead of the present three days each Fall. Game laws have protected them for many years during which they have been legitimate targets for hunters for only three days out of 365, which explains the rate at which they are multiplying and the tameness which leads them to invade farms and uproot hedges, even in populous districts.

Emile Utard, President of the Franco-American Board of Commerce and Industry, gave a dinner last night in the Union League Club, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, at which General Henri Gouraud, famous French war leader, was guest of honor. M. Utard recounted the military achievements of General Gouraud, who received an ovation when he rose to speak.

General Gouraud expressed appreciation over the welcome he had received on coming to the United States. Remarking that the French Foreign Office had told him of the enterprise of the American press, General Gouraud said that THE NEW YORK TIMES had been characterized to him as "one of the fairest and most complete newspapers in the whole world." He added that he had been able to keep abreast of European as well as American news through THE TIMES.

Among the guests were Gaston Liebert, Minister Plenipotentiary; Charles Barret, Consul General for France in New York; General Reilly, Lieut. Col. A. E. Anderson, C. A. Le Neven, Commercial Attaché of the French Embassy; Andre Brouzet, Consul of France; Lieutenant Vicomte de Vibray, Alfred E. After leaving the Union League Club, General Gouraud went to the Army and Navy Club, where he was the guest of the 165th Regiment.

At the club he was accorded an informal reception in which the Federation of French War Veterans participated. In a brief address to the members of the 165th, General Gouraud said:

"Comrades of the 165th: I wish to express my especial appreciation to Colonel Phelan for honoring me by his invitation to be with the 165th Regiment tonight.

"I wish to send my greetings and good wishes to your former chiefs who commanded you in the hour of victory—General Mencher, General MacArthur, General Lenihan and General Frank R. McCoy.

"In finding myself in your midst I recall the last time I had the honor and pleasure of being with you. It was in a small patch of woods near Cuperly, in Champagne. You had just helped the Fourth French Army smash the last big German offensive. You surely remember that memorable day during the quiet July days just preceding the fight. The German lines at dawn and sunset seemed empty, but when our artillery started to register the enemy lines would light up with a multitude of flashes. It was the explosion of the ammunition the Germans had brought up to the front line for the forthcoming offensive. The peaceful serenity displayed by nature then was no greater than the calm then reigned in your hearts and ours."

General Gouraud yesterday afternoon visited the grave of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. For fully five minutes after he had placed a floral wreath decorated with the tri-color of France on the headstone of the grave the General stood with bowed head and in prayer. Then he bent over and made the sign of the cross.

General Gouraud then visited Sagamore Hill, where he met Mrs. Roosevelt and talked with her for more than an hour in the trophy room. In discussing the plans which he, as President of the Champagne Committee, had made to perpetuate the name of Roosevelt, he said: "You know, we are going to erect a monument in the Champagne sector. It will be of three soldiers—American, English and French—depicting them pushing into battle. I came here to get a picture of your son Quetin, so I may have a likeness of him to be used in the statue as a true type of American."

LONDON, July 3.—The Duke of Leinster was found guilty by a jury at the Old Bailey yesterday on the charge of obtaining credit from Straker & Squire without disclosing that he was an undischarged bankrupt. The jury recommended him to mercy on the ground that he believed that Straker & Squire had been told that he was an undischarged bankrupt.

The Judge postponed judgment until the next session of the court, July 16, and said the Duke would be kept in custody until then.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—At the general session of the National Educational Association in the Civic Auditorium, this evening, the main topic of discussion was "the American School Program." The scope of the work of education in the schools of the country in its different phases and methods and results attained, as well as suggestions for further development and improvement, were handled by experts, including Elwood P. Cubberley, Dean of the School of Education, Stanford University; Thomas E. Finegan, former State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, Penn.; William L. Ettinger, Superintendent of Schools, New York City; Florence M. Hale, State Agent for Rural Education, Augusta, Maine.

In recounting what he considers typical present-day problems in our large cities and suggesting implications with reference to future developments, Mr. Ettinger cited as one of the most important and most perplexing problems the determination of the relation of the Board of Education to the municipality on the one hand and to the State on the other. He said:

"While the generally accepted legal theory, as expressed in statutes and decisions, is to the effect that education is a State function, carried on chiefly by means of funds provided by the city, the fact remains, as evidenced by controversies country-wide, that arise over the attempts of well-intentioned municipal authorities to treat and to control educational funds, educational policies and educational administration as identical with those of city departments, that there is a wide zone of disputed authority that should be made the subject of professional study and statutory regulation.

At another point Mr. Ettinger referred to a "most obvious need which, paradoxically enough, is most frequently ignored. We must properly house our children, not in ancient buildings, insufficient in number and defective as regards safety, sanitation and architectural beauty and deficient in the equipment needed for real living on the part of the child. Rather must we provide sufficient modern schoolhouses, in accordance with well-conceived city plans, to enable each child to receive full-time schooling in buildings which, from the standpoint of safety, sanitation and equipment, conform to the highest standards of notable buildings built through private enterprise.

"Another thought I would emphasize is that democracy demands for her children an education commensurate with the diversity of their talents and the versatility of their genius. * * * In every stage of the pupil's career, despite the economic necessity of mass instruction, the child must be individualized through the application of intelligence and achievement tests, so that he will neither strive without succeeding nor succeed without striving.

"To every child according to his ability, whether he be a physical or a mental defective or a precocious youngster of superb vitality and surpassing talent, every opportunity must be extended. We must assure to each an equality of opportunity to attain his place in the sun.

"The myth of the so-called average pupil has been driven forth as a pariah from our midst, never to return."

NEW SINGLE-GEAR SHAFT MYSTIFIES SCIENTISTS

One End Turns at 17,000 Revolutions a Minute While the Other Turns at 5 an Hour.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, July 3.—A little piece of steel mechanism in Machinery Hall, Carnegie Institute of Technology, defies all hitherto known laws in mechanical engineering and demonstrates the harnessing and application of mechanical power in a way never before known.

The little power maker is a section of a cane shaft, the driving end of the shaft, turned by a five horsepower motor, and speeded up to 17,000 revolutions a minute. The other end of the shaft turns at the rate of only five revolutions an hour and develops power which it had been impossible to measure. It has been tested up to the lift of twelve tons. This reduction in speed and gain of power is accomplished in a single gear unit.

The new principle makes it possible to do away with all the complicated trains of gears in automobiles, hoists, air compressors, rock breakers, belt conveying machines, elevators, mechanical stokers, metal shearing and punching machines, spinning and weaving machines where the main shafting or drive is run at high speed.

In its simplest form the new "gear" does not have a single cog wheel or even a wheel with a single tooth. One end of the driving shaft is spigotted into the end of the driven shaft, turning free on ball bearings, instead of resting in a journal. This driving or high speed shaft on its outside circumference turns between three or four rollers, one or two of which are larger than the others. These rollers roll on the inside of a steel ring, slightly off centre. As the inner rollers turn on the high speed shaft the out ring becomes the driving gear. The difference in the diameters of the parts establishes the rate of reduction in speed. The larger roller or rollers continually turn to maintain their position in the circular wedge so that no pressure has yet been found to make the shaft slip.

In extended form, effecting reduction of speed from thousands of revolutions a minute to one an hour, the outer steel ring is converted into a cogwheel engaged by direct connection with the drum of a hoist or other machinery. Even in this form the gear is not one of cogs, strictly speaking, since the greater number of the teeth are always in mesh. In other form the new gear does away with a brake.

The inventor of the new gear is George Smith Morrison, an Australian, who is now in Pittsburgh.

The Biggest Piece of Fountain Pen News in over Forty Years

About this time also the typewriter was coming into practical use.

Scarcely a year passed that some fundamental improvement wasn't made in the typewriter. Until the typewriter of today is as far advanced over the typewriter of 1880 as could be imagined.

What has the fountain pen been doing all this while?

It is true that ingenious features have been brought out from time to time.

The public bought generously—always looking for improvement.

But go into the offices and homes of this country—rummage out all the discarded fountain pens—and you see a nation of fountain pen users still unsatisfied.

Certainly the makers of the John Hancock Cartridge Pen had plenty of guidance in what not to do when they started out to make a better writing instrument.

A principle that made writing certain from the touch of pen to paper till every drop of ink was gone.

A principle that wiped out every experience that has always baffled a man when he picked up a fountain pen to write.

Engineering may be the last thing anyone would think of in connection with a writing instrument, but the John Hancock Cartridge Pen was developed on engineering principles.

It is the first writing instrument ever made with precision gauges—tested and inspected in all operations.

To the scientific mind writing means a precise supply of ink at all times to the pen point—always enough—never too much.

Because it is scientifically correct the John Hancock Cartridge Pen is meeting with the approval of thousands.

So the John Hancock Ink Cartridge was developed. A large supply of liquid ink in a sealed metallic cartridge. Enough ink to last the typical user for months in a flat, compact case that takes up about the same pocket room as a cigar.

A New Writing Epoch Is Here

Satisfactory writing always requires fresh, clean ink.

In the past, fountain pens were always too much at the mercy of the ink bottle and its deteriorating contents.

The John Hancock Cartridge Pen has changed all this.

The seal punctures automatically.

Then write.

And John Hancock Cartridges can be taken safely anywhere, from a few days' business trip to a tour around the world.

Think of what this new convenience means to our modern civilization with its multitude of different writing needs under hundreds of varying conditions.

The New Epoch in the use of ink is here.

It arrived when the John Hancock Cartridge Pen was invented and announced as the biggest piece of fountain pen news in over forty years.

Yesterday

Why? Because our plans for Christmas are being laid. Hot July weather hasn't troubled us a bit. And though everything seems cool and summery in the Toy Shop, the store-rooms are a-bustle with early preparations for that holiday which is dear to every child's heart.

Were you able to look in you would find men opening boxes and interesting packages just brought in by steamers and trains. There are heaps of good things coming in every day. French dollies, Scavini dollies, novelties from England, almost-real animals from the North and hundreds of other playthings which Santa will bring to the homes of our little friends on the Night before Christmas.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Natures God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. ——— We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world. ——— He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. ——— He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them. ——— He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only. ——— He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures. ——— He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people. ——— He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within. ——— He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands. ——— He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers. ——— He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries. ——— He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harrass our people and eat out their substance. ——— He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies, without the Consent of our legislatures. ——— He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power. ——— He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: — For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us: — For protecting them by a mock Trial from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: — For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: — For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent: — For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of Trial by Jury: — For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences: — For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: ——— For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: — For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. — He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. ——— He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. ——— He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & Perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. ——— He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. ——— He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends. ———

We, therefore the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved, and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. ——— And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Irregular Downward Reaction in Many Stocks—Sterling Exchange Goes Still Lower.

On the Stock Exchange yesterday's movement was generally downward, though with little uniformity in the trend. In the foreign exchange market there was similar irregularity, the decline in sterling continuing. It was not easy to determine to what extent the weakness in certain stocks arose from renewed liquidation, or how far it merely represented professional operations to force the market down. Even at times when a stock market has definitely turned from a prolonged movement in one direction, it is always subject to what looks at the moment like resumption of its previous course. Nobody has forgotten how, after the rise in stocks had distinctly reached its end last March, the subsequent downward reaction was repeatedly varied by a day in which "the pools" would again be bidding up their favorite stocks, with Wall Street talking higher prices. We now know that when the long decline had culminated in June, 1921, the market was shaping for the recovery which was to follow; but that did not prevent professional operators for the decline from creating during the next two months, from time to time, the appearance of a downward movement that could not be withstayed.

No doubt it is too early to draw conclusions yet; but yesterday's declines were sufficiently scattered and irregular to have less of significance on their face than last week's days of sweeping reaction. Net losses of a point or more were fairly numerous, railway shares having as much a part in the decline as the industrials. There was little recovery at the last.

Nothing occurred to explain the continuing decline in sterling, which carried the rate below $4.56. At the day's low figure, which had not been touched since Dec. 5, sterling was nearly 13½ cents under last year's highest and more than 16¼ below the top rate of last February. Yesterday's decline occurred in the face of slight recovery in Continental exchanges, which would seem to exclude the ever-present "Ruhr" as a primary cause. Shifting of international capital from London to New York remains, in fact, the only intelligible explanation; yet that itself requires explaining. There is something of the unreal in a situation marked by New York's recall of the capital put at Europe's disposal during 1922. The only certainty is that, at some time in the not very remote future, the drift of economic forces will compel reversal of the present attitude.

The country's iron production, on which the monthly figures are always watched as an index to general trade conditions, showed in yesterday's report for June the first interruption since last July to the continuous monthly increase. There had in fact been an almost unbroken rise in the daily average since July, 1921. During the interval, the daily output had risen from 77,880 in that month (the smallest since 1903) to the 124,704 tons of last May, which surpassed all records before, during or since the war. The decrease last month was not large—2,484 tons in the daily average, or not quite 2 per cent.—and it still leaves last month's daily production the largest on record except for the preceding month.

A mid-summer decrease of this sort has no great significance, except as it follows other familiar indices of trade in showing, if not a definite reaction at all events a check to the movement of expansion. A similar though equally slight decrease in weekly and monthly exchange of bank checks has been lately in evidence. Consumption of cotton by American mills decreased from a daily average of 201,000 bales in March to 192,400 in April. Railway traffic measured by loadings has practically kept at the season's maximum during recent weeks, but loadings of general merchandise have been running 9,000 to 12,000 cars per week below the April record. Yet of all these indices except bank clearings (which in 1920 were inflated by the abnormal prices) it is to be observed, as it is of iron production, that the present figures remain far in advance of the season's best record in any other year.

MONEY.

TUESDAY, July 3, 1923.

Stock Exchange call money was easier, as expected, following on redistribution of July investment funds, rate moving off to 4 per cent., from the opening, and renewal at 4½, and interval of 3 and 4½. Minimum charge was lowest in three weeks. Softness was apparent in fixed period funds, although quotations continued unchanged at 5@5¼ per cent.; there being noticeable increase in lenders' offerings at outside figure, though business continued on small scale. Business money markets were quiet and without change.

WILLYS FACTIONS CLASH FOR CONTROL

Insiders Bid $3,000,000 for 739,866 Shares, Distributers $1,500,000 for 300,000.

SHARP ARGUMENT DEVELOPS

Trickery Charged at Federal Court Hearing, Which is Put Over Until July 23.

Another long argument yesterday before Federal Judge Knox, the disposition of the 739,866 shares of common stock of the Willys-Overland Company, owned by the Willys Corporation, and in control of its receiver, Colonel Francis G. Caffey, was postponed until July 23 because of unsettled conditions attending two of the bids likely to receive the most favorable consideration. These bids were made by Thomas H. Tracy, representing the faction in the Willys-Overland Company headed by John N. Willys, President of the company, and George W. Browne and Guy C. Simons, distributers of the company's cars.

The Willys-Tracy bid was $3,000,000 for all shares, with the stipulation that all profits on the stock in excess of $3 a share should be distributed among the stockholders of the Willys Corporation for a period to be agreed upon. With this bid was a check for $150,000, which the bidders wanted returned if the bid was rejected. This provision was objected to by the Court on Monday and yesterday the terms were modified so that the Court should have the unrestricted disposal of the check. Undoubtedly it will be returned if the bid it guarantees is not successful.

The Browne-Simons bid was $1,500,000 for 300,000 shares of the stock with the stipulation that none of the remaining stock should be offered for a period of six months. Yesterday the representatives of these bidders promised to deposit at least $15,000 with the Court as a guarantee and to increase this amount to any figure set by the Court.

Counsel for the merchandise and bank creditors were eager that the $3,000,000 bid be accepted because it promised ready money and a quick settlement of the claims of their clients. Joseph M. Hartfield and Eldon Bisbee, who represent these two classes of creditors of the Willys Corporation, railed against the offer of the Willys-Tracy group, and expressed the opinion that it was not made in good faith; that its purpose was to delay the sale of the stock, and that it was full of trickery.

Mr. Tracy expostulated against this manner of speech and told the Court that in Ohio litigation was conducted with more regard for ethics, and that not even in a district court would intimation that counsel was attempting to deceive the Court be tolerated. The division between the counsel representing the diverse interests within the Willys-Overland Company grew sharper as the argument continued, and it was clear that the fight for control of the Willys Overland concern would be fought to a finish.

During the discussion Judge Knox, Receiver Caffey and his counsel indicated that the only interest in the matter was to see that the stockholders of the Willys Corporation obtained the best return possible on their holdings; that the bid most favorable to them would be accepted, and that all other things would be disregarded.

The Willys Corporation that failed with liabilities amounting to about $18,000,000, and for which receivers were appointed in several States, will pay off all its debts, and the only question, according to Receiver Caffey, is how big the surplus will be. Plants of the corporation in Poughkeepsie and Syracuse in this State, in Toledo, Ohio, and in Elizabeth, N. J., have been sold, and the return from these sales and the cash received for securities aggregated $18,000,000, which was paid to creditors. All the lien creditors have been paid and there is left, besides the Willys-Overland stock, cash in bank amounting to about $1,000,000 and a large amount represented by securities that have not been marketed.

Receiver Caffey said that the offer of $3,000,000 for the Willys-Overland stock amounted to only $4.06 a share and that the stock had sold for as high as $25. Asked if he thought it would again reach this high figure he replied:

"I don't care to prophesy, but the stock is staging a great big come-back. The Willys-Overland Company is one of the most successful in the country and its business keeps growing all the time."

The hearing on the 23d will be held before Judge Knox in Buffalo.

EMPLOYES TO BUY STOCK.

Continental Oil Calls Meeting to Consider Acquisition Plan.

Directors of the Continental Oil Company have called a special meeting of stockholders for Aug. 2, 1923, to be held in Denver, for the purpose of approving a proposal under which employes of the company may acquire stock in the organization. Under the plan employes will be given the privilege to purchase stocks to the extent of 20 per cent. of the annual earnings and for each dollar subscribed by the employe the company will contribute 50 cents.

The stock acquisition plan for employes is now in successful operation among employes of the Steel Corporation, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Vacuum Oil Company, Standard Oil of California, Texas Company, Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., and many other large organizations. In some instances the stock sold to employes is bought by the company in the open market and sold on the average price paid by the company. In the case of the Texas Company the stock is sold at the par value and the Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., sells its stock at the book value of the shares.

STEEL INDUSTRY STILL NEAR PEAK

PRICES AT A STANDSTILL

Buyers Keeping Orders Close to Known Needs, Says The Iron Age.

The iron and steel industry of the country entered the second half of 1923 with operations only slightly below the peak levels for all time reached in May of this year, according to trade authorities. Production of pig iron was estimated at only 2 per cent. below the May peak, while the output of steel ingots was only 5 per cent. below the year's highest mark reached in the same month. It is said that there is no measurable change in the large volume of product moving into consuming channels. Prices for the important forms of finished steels are at a stand, but buyers are betting on better delivery promises and are keeping orders close to known needs. As has been the case for several weeks primary materials are giving ground, fresh declines being reported in coke, pig iron and scrap.

"A number of sheet mills are closed down this week," says The Iron Age. "Some few mills will be idle next week also. The Steel Corporation's shutdowns are limited at most plants to July 4, and and this is the program also of most independent companies.

"Generally speaking, labor shortage and weather conditions are offsetting in part the tendency of some rolling mills to catch up with their orders. Final specifications on second quarter contracts came in freely last week, indicating that consumers want what they have bought.

"The week's fabricated structural steel contracts were brought up to the average of recent weeks by unusual purchases, totaling 11,500 tons, for oil tanks. Private projects continue noteworthy among structural inquiries.

"The sheet market is inactive and the concession of $1 a ton on black sheets continues. The mill shutdowns will bring supply and demand into closer relation. The automobile companies are buying body sheets more freely, some for third quarter and some for shorter periods. The Ford Motor Company's July schedule is 7,040 cars a day, or 176,000 cars for twenty-five working days.

"A good deal of tin plate inquiry has come up for July and August shipment, including one lot of 500,000 boxes and another of 100,000 boxes.

"In the pig iron market, on limited sales, price recessions are general. Basic iron has declined $1.50, to $25.50, Valley, and 2,500 tons was sold at $25.25. Prices on both foundry and steel making grades are down $1 at Chicago and on resales charcoal iron has been sold $3 below furnace quotations. In Buffalo, Cleveland and Eastern Pennsylvania quotations on foundry grades have declined, while in the South $23, Birmingham, still prevails.

"It takes 7,800,000 marks this week to buy a ton of sheets in Germany, or as much as would have bought a 4,000-ton cruiser ten years ago. The current exchange this is only 2.09 cents per pound. Sharp advances in German iron and steel prices on July 2 did not offset the fall in exchange, and the steel bar quotation, for example, is equivalent to 1.25 cents per pound and No. 1 foundry iron to $18.68 per gross ton.

"For nine weeks finished steel composite price has stood at 2.789 cents per pound—within 1¼ per cent. of the highest point in twenty-eight months.

"Lower than it has been since the first week of February last, pig iron composite price is now at $26.79 per gross ton, against $27.79 last week. It is now more than $4 below its high point in March and April."

IRON OUTPUT SMALLER; FIRST TIME IN A YEAR

Decrease in June Daily Average 2,484 Tons—Follows Long Uninterrupted Increase.

Returns of the country's iron output during June, as published yesterday by The Iron Age, show the first decrease in the rate of output that has occurred in any month since last July. Total production for the month was 3,688,412 tons, or 122,280 tons per day, as against 3,867,694 tons in the longer month of May, or 124,764 tons a day. Eight furnaces blew in last month and seven blew out. The decrease in June output is ascribed partly to the hot weather, and a further moderate decrease is expected in July, as several furnaces are going out for relining. Active capacity on July 1 is stated as practically unchanged from the 135,100 of June 1. Monthly output during the last three years compares as follows, in tons:

PAN-AMERICAN EARNS $16,000,000 THIS YEAR

Profits for First Six Months Equal $6.40 a Share, Best in History of the Oil Company.

Net earnings in excess of $16,000,000, or $6.40 a share on approximately 2,500,000 shares outstanding, will be reported by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company for the half year just ended, it was learned yesterday. These earnings are the best in the company's history and officers expect they will be maintained during the second half year, so that the company will earn in 1923 approximately $12 a share on the stock. The present dividend of $3 a share will be continued.

Notwithstanding large expenditures of money in the development of its California properties, the company's cash balance continues to grow and was said yesterday to be in excess of $80,000,000. These California expenditures are being taken care of out of current earnings.

It was explained that Pan-American Petroleum was able to maintain its earnings at a record rate largely because owing to increased demand there has been no reduction in the price of fuel oil, which is its chief product. Another factor has been the extraordinary production of light oil in California, which has broken the gasoline market but has not upset the fuel oil market because the amount of fuel oil obtainable from California production has not been sufficient to offset the loss of fuel oil supplies caused by a smaller output in Mexico, the source of the big fuel oil supply.

The company's first 12,500-barrel unit of its refinery at Wilmington, on Los Angeles harbor, is expected to be in operation about two weeks and a similar unit will be added shortly thereafter. This will enable the company to refine California crude oil which is being sold in the present period of overproduction at unusually low prices. The company is following a similar policy with Panuco crude oil in Mexico.

Two large concrete reservoirs are being constructed at the company's plant in Wilmington, Cal. One nearing completion will hold 1,250,000 barrels of oil, and the other, to be completed shortly, 1,500,000 barrels.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Reaction Continued, With Improvement in Some Rates on Profit Taking.

European exchanges on the whole continued irregular and heavy again yesterday. There were several periods of active bidding in the forenoon which resisted the onslaught of offerings, representing profit taking by previous sellers for the decline, but in the afternoon pressure predominated with resultant new low levels for English, Spanish and Swiss remittances.

Sterling declined to a new low since last Dec. 5 at $4.55⅛, a drop of slightly more than a cent from Monday's final; pesetas sagged to 14.15 cents from 14.18, and the Swiss franc was 3 points lower at 17.41 cents. French francs were also slightly below Monday's minimum which closed up 1⅛ points at 5.92 cents. German marks were firm at a slight improvement of ⅝ point at 6¼ ten-thousandths of a cent. Holland and Italian were steady, while in the Scandinavians concessions were reported in the Danish and Norwegian rates, with Stockholm steady.

Far Eastern were weak, the recent depreciation in the price of silver having a serious effect on the currencies of the Chinese, Indian and Japanese countries, new low records for the year being touched in Hongkong, Shanghai, Peking and Calcutta. South Americans were also lower.

In the subjoined table the quotation in sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

DECLARES IT INEQUITABLE

Letter Says Only a Few Will Benefit if Proposal of Committee Is Accepted.

Thomas C. Perkins, Chairman of the Stockholders' Protective Committee of the Habirshaw Electric Cable Company, has sent a letter to the creditors of the company and its subsidiaries which contains his views of the recent plan of reorganization drawn up by the committee representing the two creditors' committees and the bondholders' committee. In his letter Mr. Perkins says the "plan of reorganization is, in the opinion of the writer, so inequitable to all of the interests concerned, including the stockholders who are not recognized in any way, and there are so many proper objections that may be raised against it on behalf of the creditors, that in my judgment there is no possible chance of this plan becoming effective if the creditors and the bondholders understand fully just what this plan contemplates."

Mr. Perkins adds that from his point of view the plan is "for the benefit of the few and to the disadvantage of the many, and contains in its essence the kind of plan of reorganization that has brought in the past so much odium and unfavorable comment upon Wall Street methods." The plan is so involved, he says, that few will be able to understand and that those who subscribe to it "will go into it blindly." The situation has been allowed to drag along for several years, according to the letter, and during that period the stockholders' committee has exhausted every effort to co-operate with the various committees in an "equitable plan of reorganization or to bring the situation out into the open so that all parties in interest could understand just what the situation was."

To Settle Claims.

Attention is also called to the fact that the reorganization plan contains no statement as to the present position of the company, "except very briefly in the most general way. Nothing is said about the company having made a half a million profit since the 1st of January up to the present time; nothing is said as to the company earning a profit of approximately a hundred thousand dollars a month at present; nothing is said about the amount of business the company is doing; no statement is made that the receivers are discounting all their bills; nor is any statement made as to how much cash the receivers have accumulated in the bank; nor is there any financial statement showing clearly the present financial conditions of the properties, the amount of inventory carried at the present time and assets and liabilities."

The letter further says that "as I read this plan, it amounts to about this: 'The creditors are not given any information about the situation, but are simply told: Here is a small hole; you have got to go through it whether you like it or not.' The writer then gives some facts which he considers pertinent:

"The gist of this whole plan, as I read it, is substantially as follows: A new company is to be organized to take over through a sale by the court all the assets of these companies. The new company is to have a capitalization of $1,500,000 8 per cent. preferred stock and 300,000 shares of common stock either with a par value of $10 per share or with no par value, from which it would naturally be assumed that the common stock would have a book value of $10 per share whether it was a par value of $10 per share or no par value.

"The creditors are divided into three classes: (1) Merchandise creditors whose claims are regarded to be on the basis of 100 per cent. (2) Holders of endorsed notes; this means bank creditors whose claims are regarded to be on a basis of 112½ per cent. (3) Debenture bondholders whose claims are regarded to be on a basis of 125 per cent.

"One hundred and fifty thousand shares of common stock are to be given to the creditors (merchandise creditors, bank creditors and debenture bondholders) in full settlement for their claims, assuming that the total amount of the claims is not in excess of $5,000,000, not including the Government claim." Somewhere in the picture says Mr. Perkins, "some 60,000 shares of cash or common stock." If this stock should be worth $10 a share, "this would be a value of $300,000 that somebody gets. Perhaps if the creditor will read over the plan of reorganization very carefully he may be able to discover just who gets this $300,000 and for what services. At any rate, one can hardly escape the conclusion that the giving away of this value dilutes the value of the balance of the common stock just so much. Pursuing our investigation as to where the rest of the common stock goes we find that the creditors are offered an opportunity to subscribe for $3,000 worth of stock at par, or three and eighty shares of common stock for $1,000 and if the creditors do not subscribe for this stock then the underwriters may take it on this basis. On this basis of eighty shares of common stock with each $1,000 worth of preferred stock it would require 120,000 shares of common stock, thereby accounting for the balance of the common stock."

In conclusion Mr. Perkins says the "stockholders have always been ready and anxious to furnish the money necessary to rehabilitate the property, and are prepared to offer the creditors 100 cents on the dollar in some form of note or evidence of indebtedness, bearing interest with every protection to the creditors, at the rate of 100 cents on the dollar in settlement for every legal claim." He further says that, "as I interpret it" the plan "means that each $1,000 bondholder will receive 33 1/3 shares of common stock in the new company in full settlement of his claim."

American Trust Deposits Gain.

SOUTHWEST COPPER FIELDS MAY COMBINE

Officials of Several Companies Along Border Agree on Merger Plan.

Officials of copper companies of the Southwestern copper section, who for several months have been discussing plans for the merging of ten or more companies, were reported yesterday as having agreed in principle to the merger plan. The whole proposition is still vague, although several officials express confidence that it will be effected.

Some of the companies mentioned as merger candidates are the Calumet and Arizona, Calumet and Hecla, Chino, Greene-Cananea, Inspiration, Nevada, New Cornelia and Phelps-Dodge.

The Calumet and Arizona will serve as the nucleus around which the contemplated company will be built.

The program is in line with that of the Anaconda Copper Company, which last January completed a series of mergers which included originally the American Brass Company and more recently the Chile Copper Company. A second merger was that of the Utah Copper Company by the Kennecott Copper Company.

The new company, as now pictured by exponents of the combination, will include not only the copper companies of Arizona and New Mexico, but will also take in companies operating in the northern part of the Republic of Mexico. At the present time 55 per cent. of the copper production of North and South America is uncoordinated. Through a combination of companies producers contend that they can make prices of copper more uniform through controlling and regulating the production of that metal.

MAY REORGANIZE BATOPILAS

Mining Company Asks to Have Its Stock Stricken From List.

Application has been made to the New York Stock Exchange by the Batopilas Mining Company to have its stock stricken from the list. The shares were suspended from the Boston Exchange some time ago. This action is being taken, it is said, with a view to reorganize the company.

For several years the stock has been selling below $1 a share on the Stock Exchange. At the close yesterday it was quoted at ¼ bid and offered at ½. A sale of 100 shares at ¾ was reported on Monday. Of an authorized capital stock of $9,000,000 there is listed on the Exchange a total of $8,939,920, or 446,496 shares of $20 par value each. The stock was admitted to trading on the Exchange on May 12, 1909. The company was organized in 1887 by a consolidation of six companies which had an aggregate capitalization of $12,050,000. All of the property is in Mexico.

WESTERN PACIFIC PLANS STOCK BONUS

Dividend of 16 2-3 in Shares to Be Paid if D. & R. G. Reorganization Move Is Approved.

STOCKHOLDERS ACT AUG. 26

Statement Says Net Recovery of Corporation Will Be About $13,606,000.

The Western Pacific Railroad Corporation will pay a stock dividend of 16 2-3 per cent. on both the common and preferred stock, if the reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad System, as now contemplated, is carried to completion. This announcement was made yesterday by Alvin W. Krech, chairman of the corporation, in a message to the stockholders, calling for a special meeting on Aug. 6, at Wilmington, Del., to approve the plan of reorganization.

"Additional preferred and common stock of this corporation," Mr. Krech said in the statement, "will be distributed to its stockholders at the rate of one share of preferred and one share of common stock for each six shares of preferred or common stock held by them, respectively, preferred and common stockholders sharing alike.

"This dividend is to be declared for the purpose of capitalizing the recoverings and recognizing the pro rata rights of the preferred and common stockholders in the benefits arising from the assets derived from such recoveries, as provided in the Articles of Incorporation of the corporation."

Approval a Formal Move

The plan for reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad System has been approved by the Missouri Pacific and the representatives of the three bondholders' committees. Its approval by the shareholders of the Western Pacific is considered as a formal step in the plan.

Included in the call for the meeting is a summary of the "past accounts, the proposed reorganization and the consequent situation," which sums up the conditions for the stockholders, as follows:

|---|---|
| "This corporation has received in cash from the Equitable Trust Company of New York as trustee of the bondholders of the old Western Pacific Railway Company pursuant to the judgment obtained by said trustee against the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company, approximately | $8,200,000.00 |
| "And in the future will receive from such trustee in each a sum estimated at approximately | 200,000.00 |
| "These payments will represent 34.903 per cent.* of the net cash recoveries made by the Equitable Trust Company of New York as such trustee. | |
| "This corporation has also received in cash or Liberty Bonds | $3,928,813.69 |
| "And will receive dividends on the same being dividends declared and paid by the Utah Fuel Company (the equity in the stock of that company being one of the recoveries made under said judgment). | |
| "And under the plan, if it be carried out, should receive in addition thereto, also from the Utah Fuel Company by way of a dividend or as a payment to be made to this corporation under the plan the further sum of | 2,000,000.00 |
| "It also should receive as a consequence of the settlement of sequoita between the Denver & Rio Grande Western and the receiver thereof at least the further sum of | 740,821.17 |
| "The total cash receipts from the sources above mentioned will, it is estimated, amount to the sum of | $14,069,634.86 |

"Holders of Western Pacific stock of the bonds did not become parties to the Western Pacific Plan of Reorganization. The face amount of the judgment recovered in the year 1917 by the Equitable Trust Company of New York as trustee exceeded $86,000,000 and in spite of the recoveries made there is still due and unpaid over $50,000,000. The judgment debtor's assets, however, are believed to have been exhausted.

Net Recovery $13,606,787.

Under the judgment which the Western Pacific obtained against the Denver & Rio Grande other recoveries of property were made, including stock of the Utah Fuel Company, the Railway System of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company transferred to the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, and other stocks and bonds, so that, according to this statement, the net recovery under this judgment is estimated at $13,606,787.

In event the proposed plan of reorganization is carried out, it is expected, the report to the shareholders says, that the corporation will own all the stock of the Western Pacific Railroad Company, one-half of the common capital stock of the Reorganized Denver Company, one-half of the issue of the stock of the Utah Fuel Company, subject to the existing pledge thereof under the Rio Grande Western Railway Company's consolidated 4 per cent. mortgage, and (2) the charges and trusts in favor of the security holders of the Reorganized Denver Company, and cash and securities recovered from the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Company under or pursuant to the aforesaid judgment, or received from the sale of the half interest in the Reorganized Denver Company and the Utah Fuel Company, $13,680,025.

"In brief," the report says, "instead of owning all the stock of the Reorganized Denver Company, and all of the stock of the Utah Fuel Company (as contemplated in the prior plan of reorganization), and contributing substantially $10,000,000 to the reorganization of the Reorganized Denver Company, this corporation will own one-half of the common stock of the Reorganized Denver Company, one-half the equity in the stock of the Utah Fuel Company, subject to the provisions of the plan, and while contributing $10,000,000 toward the reorganization of that company will nevertheless receive for a one-half interest in that company from the Missouri Pacific Railroad $8,600,000."

"This settlement has been made in order to avoid litigation which threatened to continue for a long period of time, and although in the opinion of counsel the final results of this litigation would not be adverse to this corporation it is believed that the benefits which will in the long run be derived from the plan now submitted will exceed those which would result from the continuance of such litigation."

Capital Stock Increased.

The New York Stock Exchange yesterday received notice from the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company of a proposed reduction in that company's $ per cent. preferred stock to $4,305,075 and an increase in capital stock by $10,696,825 of 7 per cent. preferred stock and $3,000,000 of common stock.

HAS CASH TO BUILD ITS LINE IN MEXICO

Southern Pacific to Finance Construction Now Under Way Out of Its Treasury.

Construction of ninety-eight miles of railroad in Mexico by the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico will be financed temporarily from the treasury of the Southern Pacific Company, it was announced yesterday. This improvement, which, it is expected, eventually will be paid for out of funds to be turned over by the Mexican Government in settlement of claims for more than $13,000,000 made by the railroad, will cost between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The purpose of the construction is to connect the present line of the Southern Pacific with the National Railways of Mexico and complete a route between the United States and Mexico City. Fifteen miles of the line is being constructed by the railroad itself, and contractors are building about eighty-five miles from La Quemada to Tepic. All this work is well under way and progressing from both ends.

For a time it was thought that the new construction might be financed by the issuance of bonds or short term notes. It is now stated that such a procedure will not be necessary, as the Southern Pacific Company has sufficient funds in the treasury. On Dec. 31 last there was $19,000,000 cash on hand. Out of this it was pointed out, it would be a simple matter to provide for $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 that would be replaced in a few years.

WARNS OF DOLLAR GASOLINE

Producer Says Government Regulation Would Increase Cost.

Any attempt on the part of the Government to regulate the oil industry "unquestionably would bring about an oil famine and eventually dollar gasoline," William G. Skelly, President of the Skelly Oil Company and an independent operator in the mid-continent field, declared yesterday in commenting on the La Follette committee recommendations.

"Furthermore," said Mr. Skelly, "governmental control would frighten capital and the millions of dollars needed each year to meet the increasing demands of the public for oil products will not be available—just as this money is not available now for the Government-regulated railroads."

He said that if the operators, refiners and marketers were permitted to work out their own problems unhampered gasoline for the next ten or fifteen years would be cheap. The La Follette program, no matter how well intentioned, "would not bring about lower prices, he added.

MENDEN'S ACTS APPROVED

Report to Directors on Elevated Accident States No Cost Is Spared to Assure Safety.

A report on the elevated wreck in Brooklyn a week ago in which eight persons were killed, was made yesterday to the Board of Directors of the B. M. T. by Gerhard M. Dahl, Chairman of the board. The board approved the action taken by President W. S. Menden and other officers of the company, particularly in respect to co-operation with the District Attorney's office.

The report exonerated the motorman, and stated that the timber deck, including the guard beams, had been in place ten years, less than the average life of such superstructure. The two cars of the train that was wrecked had been over the same line past the point of the accident nine times on the day in question.

"We are advised that during the period of receivership no restraints of any character had been placed upon the several departments limiting to any extent the expenditures required for the safe maintenance of the structure or the equipment," the report said, "a policy which, of course, has been continued by the management since the properties have been taken over by the new company.

"It is the judgment of your officers that everything humanly possible should be done to ascertain the cause of the accident and unearth whatever imperfections may exist in standards of construction, equipment or maintenance, to the end that the possibility of a recurrence of such an accident will be reduced to a minimum. The members of this board have undertaken the public duty and responsibility of operating these properties with no connection with the past and with responsibility only for the future.

"The task of operating the transit properties of the city under existing conditions with which all are familiar, is beset with difficulties almost without parallel, and in the efforts of this board to ascertain the cause of the accident and to profit thereby to the end that operation of the lines may, if possible, be made safer for the future, the members of this board are entitled to and should receive the co-operation of all public authorities."

Assistant District Attorney Gallagher of Brooklyn yesterday questioned employes in the maintenance of way department of the B. M. T.

OTTO H. KAHN SAILS ON THE AQUITANIA

Banker Will Study Conditions in England and France, but Won't Visit Germany.

The Cunarder Aquitania sailed at 10 o'clock yesterday morning for Cherbourg and Southampton with 643 first, 614 second and 150 third class passengers and 107 sacks of mail.

Among the passengers was Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who said he was going to be away three months in Europe and would visit England, France, Austria and Hungary, but not Germany. The banker said that he intended to study financial and economic conditions, meet a few interesting people and enjoy a rest. When asked if he expected to confer with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in England, Mr. Kahn replied, "There is no relationship between our visits to the Continent or England whatever."

Carl Laemmle, the motion picture producer, who was also on the initial trip of the Leviathan recently and who was to have sailed with his wife and their son Julius today on the American liner, changed his mind and took passage on the Aquitania. He had no comment to make.

Many friends and admirers of the former flyweight champion boxer, Jimmy Wilde, who recently lost his title to the Filipino, Pancho Villa, went to the pier to give a hearty send-off to the plucky little Welsh fighter, who said he was through with the ring and would live on his estate in Wales.

Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Charles G. Norris of New York sailed with his wife on his way to Rome to have an audience with the Pope. George Grossmith, the London theatrical manager, left with some new plays which he will produce next season over there. Captain Sir James Charles, R. D. R. N., said that if he did not get any fog he would be at Cherbourg early Monday morning.

BID IN WILLS AUTO PLANT.

Boston Bankers Act in Reorganization of Michigan Company.

PORT HURON, Mich., July 3.—The properties of C. H. Wills & Co., motor car manufacturers of Marysville, near here, were bid in by Kidder, Peabody & Co., Boston bankers, for the nominal figure of $750,000 at a sale ordered by the United States District Court.

The sale, it was announced by C. M. Keyser, representing the Boston bankers, is the first step in the reorganization of the company as the Wills-St. Claire Company, with C. H. Wills at its head. Under the reorganization plan the company will have a capital of $15,000,000.

It was announced that 35 per cent. of the creditors have accepted the reorganization plan, under which creditors of different degrees of preferences will receive stock for their claims.

Boston banking interests, it was stated, will furnish $3,000,000 cash capital, most of the remaining $12,000,000 of capitalization to be ascertained among creditors and the stockholders of the present C. H. Wills & Co. The company has been operating under a receivership since Nov. 28, 1922.

BOY LOSES $30,000 STOCK.

Messenger Drops Bank Shares Owned by Brokers—Not Negotiable.

The loss of 100 shares of stock of the Public National Bank of New York, owned by J. M. Byrne & Co., brokers, of 30 Broadway, and valued at $30,000, was reported by the firm yesterday. ### Messina Co. Earns $8,000 a Month.

Profits of the Messina (Transvaal) Development Company, Ltd., are running at present at more than $8,000 a month, the company announced yesterday. An interim dividend will be declared toward the end of the year, it was stated. The company closed its mines in 1920 and resumed production in December, 1922. It produces copper.

Oil Company Declares Dividend.

3 WARRANTS ISSUED IN BUCKETING CASE

Secrecy Maintained as to Identity of Four Indicted in Connection With Fuller Crash.

Bench warrants for three of the defendants named in the four indictments in the Fuller case, returned on Monday by the Federal Grand Jury, were issued yesterday by Judge Louis Fitzhenry in United States District Court. Application for the warrants were made by Assistant United States District Attorney Victor Houtal, who presented the result of part of the Federal District Attorney's investigation to the Grand Jury.

The same secrecy, which caused the sealing of the indictments, was shown in the issuance of the bench warrants, and the identity of the defendants was not disclosed. It was said that the warrants were not likely to be served until after today's holiday.

Assistant United States District Attorney William C. Millard, who presented another part of the evidence obtained by the District Attorney to the Grand Jury, said that he did not expect any developments in the indictments he obtained before tomorrow.

There was considerable speculation concerning the indictments in the Federal Building. It was said that the indictments returned were in connection with stock transactions by members and employes of E. M. Fuller & Co. with other bankrupt brokerage firms. At least one of the indictments is believed to charge use of the mails to defraud, which is a violation of a Federal statute.

Edward M. Fuller, head of E. M. Fuller & Co., and his partner, William Frank McGee, are in Ludlow Street jail for contempt of court for failing to produce documents as directed by Judge Henry W. Goddard. As they can be produced at any time, the bench warrants obviously are not for them. It is believed that several persons were named in each of the four indictments. One of those indicted was said to be a man who has been sought as a witness in bankruptcy proceedings for some time.

BUSINESS FAILURES SHOW LARGE DECREASE

Drop 25 Per Cent. in Second Quarter Under Last Year, Says Dun's Review.

Business failures during the second quarter of 1923 show a decided reduction from the total reported in the corresponding period last year, according to a compilation made by Dun's Review. Commercial failures in the period mentioned totaled 4,408 and liabilities totaled $121,192,404, the number being 17 per cent. less than in the first quarter of the year. While liabilities were 12 per cent. smaller in amount. Compared with the same period last year failures dropped 25 per cent. and liabilities 23 per cent.

The number of commercial failures in the United States, the amount of assets reported and the amount of liabilities for the second quarter are shown below: 1923, 4,408 failures, assets $80,980,020, liabilities $121,192,404; 1922, 5,866 failures, assets $94,601,900, liabilities $153,700,973.

For the first six months of the current year failures total 9,724, a decline of 27 per cent. from the same period in 1922, while liabilities of $259,424,668 represent a falling off of 30 per cent.

PLANS BRITISH MEAT DEAL.

Union Cold Storage Tries to Buy Into Western United.

LONDON, July 3.—Following the acquisition by the Western United Investment Company of the British and Argentine Meat Company last October, comes a proposal by the Union Cold Storage Company to acquire from the Western United at a price of £4,000,000 the ordinary shares in nine leading meat concerns controlling more than 2,400 retail stores and depots in Great Britain in addition to factories and wholesale warehouses. The nine companies include the British and Argentine concern and eight of the foremost houses in the meat trade in this country.

Subject to the approval of the shareholders, the Union Cold Storage Company proposes to increase its capital to £8,780,000 by issuing 6 per cent cumulative preferred shares to a total of £3,300,000 and £700,000 in ordinary shares. The board expresses the opinion that the deal will put the company in an unrivaled position.

TO RESIGN AS GUARDIAN.

Trust Co. Files Petition in Case of Fund for Griswold Boys.

Because Mrs. Esther T. Griswold of 23 East Forty-eighth Street, widow of Le Grand B. Griswold, believes that an individual is better suited to act as guardian than a trust company, application was made in the Surrogate's Court yesterday by the Lincoln Trust Company for permission to resign as guardian for her sons, Le Grand Cannon Griswold, 18 years old, and Louis Pierce Griswold, 8. The trust company stated that Mrs. Griswold intends to have Frank T. Polk, former Assistant Secretary of State, and long a friend of her family, substituted as guardian for her sons.

The boys share in a $140,000 trust fund left by their grandmother, Mrs. Grace C. Griswold, and upon the death of their mother will get the principal of an additional trust fund of $125,000. They also shared the residuary estate of their grandmother equally. They are the grandsons of Colonel Le Grand B. Cannon, who died in Vermont in 1906.

BUS LINE SUED BY CITY.

Complaint Alleges $22,779 Is Due From City Island Company.

The fact that the City Island Motor Bus Company, which has been running to City Island since 1917 under an agreement with the city administration to pay 7½ per cent. of its gross income to the city, has not done so was made known yesterday when the city filed suit in the Supreme Court for $22,779.

Of this amount $1,000 is claimed under an agreement by the same company that it would pay $600 a year for wear and tear on the streets used. The share of the income sued for is $21,113.

The complaint states that the income of the company has been as follows: 1917, $60,451; 1918, $74,396, and 1919, $189,638.

INCREASED ACREAGE DEPRESSES COTTON

Options Range Half a Cent Per Pound Lower on Record Census Figures.

On quite general selling inspired by the monthly report of the previous day, cotton broke another half cent or more yesterday. Large acreage figures appeared to have more influence on operations than the fact that conditions of the growing crop in South Carolina, Georgia, Arkansas and Oklahoma ranged from 10 to 16 points below the ten year average. As to acreage estimates at this season of the year, the Washington record for two years past has not been good. In July 1921, the area planted was placed at 36,900,000 and then revised to read 31,078,000. Last July the acreage was given as 34,869,000 but corrected last month to 34,016,000 with only 32,036,000 acres actually harvested. With a holiday approaching and disturbing European as well as domestic influences, prices moved lower until July sold at 26 cents, with December only a few points from 23 cents. Trade buying became a feature on the decline bringing greater resistance but leaving final quotations 43 to 68 points lower on the day.

It was evident from the reception given Monday's report in drygoods and speculative circles that a greater degree of confidence in the crop outlook had resulted from certain details of that document. Though the actual indications in bales proved smaller than current ideas as to world requirements, acreage figures were so much larger than any one had anticipated that the selling movement developed in all three markets. Liverpool started with a lower range of prices, influenced not only by the bureau but by uneasiness over growing tension on the Continent. This brought out cotton on the opening with increasing weight of contracts as the morning wore on. At times New Orleans led the decline, quotations there breaking both in July and new crop positions. In New York, liquidation of July became a feature, blocks of that position being offered at steadily declining values for the first time in several days. Cotton came from all directions, not in large lots but in such persistent numbers of small orders that the total represented a considerable aggregate. Scale buying developed in December and March, evidently for trade account and this furnished a certain amount of resistance but failed to prevent a declining market.

Below 29¾ cents for October prices steadied shortly before midday only to lose further ground during the early afternoon under a weak stock market and absence of new buying on the eve of a holiday. October broke through 28.60 to 28.58, or nearly 2 cents from high records made ten days ago. Both January and March sold down over 200 points, and it was not until larger trade orders as December approached 23 cents were disclosed that the market again resisted pressure. All rallies however, proved feeble, while action of securities deprived cotton of new buying from commission house sources. Weather yesterday continued generally favorable, though Georgia had rains which would have been more beneficial if distributed over Texas. Reliable reports from the Southwest indicate that a soaking rain is wanted over a large area. As a whole, however, the crop is now improving and larger estimates as to the probable yield are expected in the event of steady betterment the coming few weeks.

Port stocks are now down to 277,000 bales as a result of two days' improved export movement. Clearances aggregated 12,000 bales yesterday, following 18,000 on Monday. Of the total stock at the ports, about 84,000 bales are in New York, an unusually large percentage.

Cash Grains and Dairy Products Show Recovery—Lead Suffers Another Cut.

There was better stability about the cash grains and dairy products in yesterday's dealings, wheat, corn, butter and eggs moving up for fractional improvement over Monday's values. There was another cut in the price of lead, one of 20 points, which put this product at the year's low at 6.65 cents. Spot cotton was again weak at a concession of 60 points to 27.25 cents. Provisions, groceries and other metals were firm.

PRE-HOLIDAY BUYING HELPS WHEAT A BIT

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 3.—While there are no claims of damage from black rust the fact that it is constantly being reported from a wider territory tends to restrict bearish operations in wheat, and, while prices were lower early on scattered selling, the market closed on a rally, with net gains of ½@¾c. July leading.

The latter at one time was practically the same price as the September, due to buying by houses with Eastern connections and a lack of pressure, but it finished ¾ cent under.

The general character of the trading was of the usual pre-holiday sort, and news on the whole had little effect, the upturn of 1¼ and 2 cents from the low point being largely due to evening up for the holiday.

Export demand on the whole remains a little slow, with sales in all positions estimated at 600,000 bushels, including 250,000 of hard Winter via the Gulf late Monday.

Heavy rains in parts of the Southwest may delay harvest slightly, but in Illinois harvesting is making rapid progress and country offerings to arrive were larger, with estimated purchases of 50,000 bushels, partly for August shipment at ½ cent over September.

Increased arrivals are expected at interior Kansas points from now on. All of the leading crop experts are now in the Northwest. The Snow-Hartlett-Frazier report made Winter wheat crop 591,000,000 bushels and Spring 228,000,000, a total of 829,000,000 bushels, or 12,000,000 more than the Government June returns and compared with 962,000,000 bushels harvested last year.

Corn acreage decreased over 1,000,000 acres and is 101,456,000 with condition 85.1, suggesting a crop of 2,800,000,000 bushels, or 91,000,000 bushels less than harvested last year.

The oats crop is estimated at 1,309,000,000 bushels, or 53,000,000 bushels in excess of the June returns and 108,000,000 bushels more than last year.

While December corn broke fractionally to a new low for the season early, there was no liquidation of consequence; and, with a better class of buying than of late the close was well toward the top, with net gains of ¾ cent. A local cash house was a persistent buyer of July, which was easily influenced, and a large local operator took the December on account of the relatively low price.

On the basis of No. 2 grades, December, at the present time, is selling equal to around 66 cents for new grain in Iowa, and 50 cents in Illinois. Receipts were smaller.

Oats closed ½@¾ cent higher and rye up ¾@¾ cent with trade largely changing between the various deliveries.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 795,000 bushels; week ago, 813,000; last year, holiday. Shipments were 961,000 bushels; week ago, 866,000.

Corn receipts were 884,000 bushels; week ago, 930,000, and shipments, 472,000 bushels; week ago, 598,000.

Will Act as Fair Guides.

A dozen pupils of the Prince School of Education for Store Service will act as guides during the Merchandise Fair at the Grand Central Palace from July 23 to Aug. 3. The management of the enterprise has recognized the need for the services of guides since the initial fair was held a year ago, and the problem was solved through the offer of Mrs. Matilda M. Prince, Director of the school. She volunteered to train a specially selected corps of her pupils. During the last week all of these girls came to this city and, at the headquarters of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, they are familiarizing themselves with the details of the work they will have to perform. With the opening of the fair they will be thoroughly equipped with complete knowledge of where the booths of the various exhibitors are located, the types of merchandise being shown by each and other details of interest in serving the visiting buyers.

FORD RETAINS LEAD IN COLLIER'S POLL

WEEKLY WONDERS WHY

Asks If Some Other Industrial Leader With Less Opposition Might Not Satisfy.

Henry W. Ford has 73,724 votes, President Harding 45,596 and William G. McAdoo, the third in the list of candidates, 17,322 votes in the Presidential poll being conducted by Collier's in the seventh instalment of the canvass made public yesterday. The total number of votes is 225,296. Collier's calls attention to the fact that one-third of its readers who have been canvassed prefer Henry Ford for President, and continues:

"We don't know why they want Ford for President and we have no idea whom they might consent to vote for as a second choice. We wish we did know. Not that there is any provision for second choices in our electoral system, but second choices generally have it all over first choices when it comes to winning a convention. Conventions as a rule aren't crazy about the idol of the biggest faction represented; conventions rather prefer to find some one who can unite all factions, and he may be some one whom none of them wants very much.

"It seems probable now that one-third of the voters of America want Ford for President. But how about the two-thirds? For all we know, they may be unanimously, first, last and all the time, opposed to Ford. Then, again, perhaps the one-third voted for Ford, not because they think he is the only possible candidate, but because they are utterly disgusted with the political way of doing things and want America to be governed by a great industrial mind."

Collier's asks if some other industrial leader might not satisfy the Ford supporters and not arouse so much opposition as the name of Ford. "America is rich in industrial geniuses," it adds, "only no one ever thought before of running one for President."

|---|---|
| Henry Ford | 73,724 |
| Warren G. Harding | 45,596 |
| William G. McAdoo | 17,322 |
| James M. Cox | 16,447 |
| Hiram W. Johnson | 14,544 |
| Alfred E. Smith | 13,264 |
| Charles E. Hughes | 12,638 |
| Herbert Hoover | 8,923 |
| Robert M. La Follette | 6,977 |
| Leonard Wood | 4,602 |
| William E. Borah | 3,497 |
| Oscar W. Underwood | 3,233 |
| John W. Davis | 2,859 |
| Frank O. Lowden | 1,536 |
| Woodrow Wilson | 1,442 |

FARMER-LABORITES IGNORE FORD'S NAME

But Michigan Men at Chicago Conference Say He Is Slated for President.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Three days ago the then approaching conference of the National Farmer-Labor Party gained attention through announcement that Henry Ford probably would be invited to be the standard bearer of that organization as a third party "economic" Presidential candidate.

Today more than 1,000 Farmer-Laborites met in Carmen's Hall for sessions that will last until Thursday night, and Mr. Ford's name was not mentioned.

"Who said Ford?" asked the La Follette delegation from Wisconsin.

"Be of good cheer," urged the Michigan representatives. "We have just come together, and while Ford's name has not been a matter of record, he is slated as the next President of the United States."

"Mother" Jones, 94 years old and idol of the United Mine Workers of America, and George S. Comings, Lieutenant Governor of Wisconsin, were two of the speakers at the initial session.

The aim of the conference, it was explained by Say G. Brown, Secretary of the National Farmer-Labor Party, is centralizing the energies of all factions opposed to the two established political parties, although not formally consolidating them.

"You must organize and use your heads," said "Mother" Jones. "You have been letting bosses override you too long. You must clear out the crooked labor leaders among yourselves.

"All you need to do is to unite politically and you can have a thorough clean-up. You will be able to clean out the gunmen in the coal fields particularly in West Virginia. It is time to get back to the spirit of the Revolutionary fathers."

Foster Appears as Delegate.

CHICAGO, July 3 (Associated Press).—Over the protests of many farmer-labor representatives, the convention voted today to seat delegates from all units which had received the call for the convention.

The report of the Credentials Committee disclosed that William Z. Foster, recently tried in Michigan for alleged communistic activities, was a delegate to the convention from a carmen's local of Chicago, while a Louisiana unit had accredited as a delegate Kate Richards O'Hare.

Despite intimations that the Socialistic party would be invited to come within the platform of the conference, Secretary Brown said he did not expect any such action to be taken.

What the organization expects to do was believed to have been expressed in addresses of former Senator R. J. Pettigrew of South Dakota, John Fitzpatrick of Chicago, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and F. A. Pike of St. Paul, Chairman of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party.

Control of the Government by the working classes, abolishment of United States courts, limiting the powers of the Supreme Court, Government ownership of the railroads, elaborate measures looking toward the stabilization of agriculture, labor and the currency and revision of taxes in many forms were directly or indirectly urged by the speakers on the floor.

BUCHAREST, July 3.—A railway accident in consequence of which sixty-three persons are reported to have been killed and more than a hundred injured, occurred yesterday at Vintelanca Station, between Buzeu and Ploesti, about thirty-five miles north of Bucharest.

Owing to the negligence of a shunter, who had left a wrong line open, the Bucharest-Jassy mail train rushed at full speed into a stationary goods train on the siding. Three passenger coaches were telescoped and one third-class carriage was reduced to match wood.

LAWYERS DEFY LAW TO FIGHT SWORD DUEL

Meet on Private Lawn Near Paris and Campinchi Twice Wounds Barquissau.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 3.—In a private garden at Saint Cloud early this morning two lawyers of the Paris Court of Appeals settled a little difference between them by the venerable method of a duel with swords.

Both men, Maître Campinchi and Maître Barquissau, are well-known and respected members of the bar, and what the nature of their quarrel was which prevented them having recourse to a settlement by their own profession has not been divulged.

Duly attended by witnesses and a doctor, they met on the lawn of a mutual acquaintance shortly after 6 o'clock. Both are good swordsmen, and the first bout passed without mishap to either. At the second bout Maître Barquissau was slightly wounded, but after the doctor had examined his wound he insisted on continuing. Maître Campinchi, however, still held the advantage, and, breaking through his opponent's guard, he wounded him again in the sword arm. The seconds then called off the duel, honor having been satisfied.

Dueling is forbidden now by law in France, and the question is raised as to whether these luminaries of the legal profession will be pursued by justice.

24 FIREMEN STRIKE ON WHITE STAR LINER

Officials Finally Forced to Comply With Demand for £5 Bonus.

Despite the fact that they were signed on the articles in Southampton to make the round voyage on the White Star liner Pittsburgh at a wage of £14 10s a month, twenty-four firemen and coal trimmers refused duty yesterday just before the vessel was due to sail at noon for Cherbourg, Southampton and Bremen with 450 cabin passengers.

The men demanded a bonus of £5, about $21, for the run. Previously the fire-room crews on the two other ships of the White Star Line had demanded £2 and £3 respectively and the company had been forced to pay it.

Eight men were shipped in their places and sent on board the Pittsburgh yesterday, but they came ashore quickly with several men pressing close behind them. Later five more firemen resembling heavyweight pugilists went up the gangway prepared to do or die. They left even more quickly than the previous strike-breakers.

Eventually the agents of the White Star Line had to submit to the bonus demand and the Pittsburgh got away at 4 o'clock. Refusing duty on board a British ship is punishable by imprisonment at the end of the voyage, according to British laws.

RULES MRS. SHOEMAKER ATTEMPTED EXTORTION

St. Louis Court Decides Her Child Is Not Son of H. H. Laumeier.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—A decision that Henry, the 3½-year-old son of Mrs. Byrd Shoemaker of New York, is not the son of Herman Henry Laumeier, a wealthy sportsman and real estate operator, was rendered today in the Circuit Court here.

The child has no claim to Laumeier's property, the Court held. The decision held that Mrs. Shoemaker, the divorced wife of Laumeier, was attempting to extort money from him through the paternity claim.

"ARTIFICIAL" LUMBER MADE.

Minnesota Experiments in Utilizing Waste Said to Be Successful.

WASHINGTON, July 3 (Associated Press).—Experiments in the making of "artificial" lumber are arousing increasing interest among government officials and leaders in the lumber industry.

Although none of the product has been marketed, officials of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association declare that tests already made of a synthetic composition produced by Minnesota lumber interests show it possesses many qualities making it available for structural purposes.

The experiments are based on somewhat the same principle as that employed in the manufacture of paper from wood pulp. In the process not only the trunks and branches of young trees, but the leaves and smaller parts as well are ground up and mixed with other substances, virtually eliminating waste. The resulting compound is capable of being moulded into sizes and shapes of almost any description needed in building.

From the time the standing tree is turned by the sawmill into planks and boards and applied in construction, from 60 to 65 per cent. has been wasted. This includes stumps, chips, bark and branches, plank and log trimmings and a huge amount of sawdust. The new method will use all of this.

200 Children Enjoy Outing.

HARVEY RESIGNATION IS RUMORED AGAIN

Report Is Revived When the Ambassador Postpones His Return to London.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Reports that Colonel George Harvey, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will soon resign his post, again are current. Added interest has been lent to them by the news from Deal, N. J., today, that Colonel Harvey will not sail for Europe tomorrow on the Leviathan, as was planned, but will go the latter part of July.

Colonel James M. Thompson, owner of the New Orleans Item, and his wife, who is a daughter of the late Champ Clark of Missouri, who have been Colonel Harvey's guest at Deal, will sail on the Leviathan.

From no official quarter in Washington is there any explanation of the reason why Col. Harvey has postponed his return to his post. His decision to remain here longer is causing gossip because it means his absence from London when there is a serious controversy between the United States and Great Britain over the seizure of liquor brought under British customs seals to New York on British liners.

When the latest report was brought to the attention of Secretary of State Hughes, he said:

"I know nothing about it. There is no vacancy in it so far as I know."

PLEA IN FLAGLER ESTATE.

Widow Asks for Accounting of Assets From Executors.

Mrs. Beatrice F. Flagler of 1160 Fifth Avenue, applied in the Surrogate's Court yesterday, to compel the Bankers Trust Company, as executor under the will of her husband, John H. Flagler, to file an accounting of the assets of the estate. She states that the will was probated last Oct. 27, but that there has been no accounting to enable her to determine the value of the estate.

Mr. Flagler left $10,000 in cash to his wife and also gave her a trust fund of $50,000. He gave $100,000 in trust to his daughter, Annie Hardan Mickay of Stamford, Conn., and $10,000 to his secretary, May C. Smith, for looking after the welfare of his daughter. His sister, Mrs. Herman Stump, got $10,000, and Miss Alice Gerrish Brindell received $5,000 in trust. A gift of $70,000 was made to the St. Cecelia Club at 135 West Fifty-eighth Street, in which his deceased wife, Alice N. Flagler was interested. The bequest of $10,000 to the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, in whose church Mrs. Alice N. Flagler sang for years, was revoked without explanation. Mr. Flagler divided the residue into five parts, one of which went to Wilson Cromwell, friend of Mr. Flagler, to be used in charitable and philanthropic work in memory of Mrs. Flagler, and the other half was to be used for the Alice M. Flagler Foundation. He provided that if the foundation had not been established at the time of his death and was not qualified to receive the gift, the share should go to St. Luke's Presbyterian and New York hospitals in equal shares.
